CURLEY 'STEAMROLLER' HIT AS COUNCIL FIGHTS GLYNN

BROOKS RAPS 'INSULT' BY GOVERNOR

BULLETIN

As a "parting shot" before resignation, Charles H. McGlue ruled off the ballot the names of all Union party delegates who had not secured court injunctions against him, he revealed today.

Appointment of a successor to Charles H. McGlue, who resigned under fire as ballot commission chairman, started a new furore at the State House today.

Governor Curley's naming of Thomas F. Glynn to succeed McGlue was met with immediate opposition from members of his executive council even before the council met on the matter of confirmation.

Failure of confirmation would leave the commission without a chairman, powerless to hear a dozen protests yet to come before it.

BROOKS LASHES CURLEY

Councillor Frank A. Brooks, flanked by Councillors Brennan, Hennessey and Schuster, fired a double-barrelled blast at Governor Curley and the ousted McGlue.

Blasting the governor for persisting in calling the special session despite the absence of Councillor Joseph S. Grossman, who is observing Yom Kippur, and charging McGlue with throwing up a "smoke screen" to veil his activities, Brooks said:

"The governor should show a little respect for the religious belief of Councillor Grossman, knowing that his presence should not be expected because of his justifiable desire to observe his religious views.

"Mr. Curley insists on holding the meeting. Such a stand by the Governor, who states his great love of races, is nothing short of an insult, and comes in poor taste

See Italy, After America A Tower That Lasts Dante's Reinforcement Pisa's Cruel Mistake

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

The articles that will follow concerning Italy are intended to convince Americans that they ought to see Italy, after they have seen the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, across the North end, the South end, and from Seattle to Miami.

First, know what you possess, then go and see what others have.

Interesting are the towers of Italy. Coming out of the fog turned you notice on the right a very old tower, buildings around it fallen down, the tower deserted. Once some mighty man lived there, protected the peasants around him that fled him, took them inside his walls when the enemy came, and lived, as he was entitled to do, on what they produced in return for his protection.

The "important road" over the mountains went past that tower a little below it. Now an occasional donkey, carrying home his master and his own supper, knows why the tower is empty.

Empty also though still standing, are the many towers scattered along the coast of Italy, used as lookout towers, to spy the pirates' ships approaching, ships manned by Saracens coming from the direction of Constantinople, especially, ships of the Phenicians that would trade with the coast population or kill them and take what they had, pirate ships with Normans, whose only idea was conquest.

The coming of an enemy was announced from the top of the Guard Chief Leahy After Death Dream

A "horrible dream" suffered by a Cambridge housewife, who claims she was a victim of the parasitic seed of evil, resulted in Chief Timothy F. Leahy's being in Hollis street today.

The plaintiff whose name the chief would not divulge today, telephoned Lieutenant Robert J. Doughty, Jr., at headquarters that she had dreamed a "positive dream" that person or persons were hastening over to the chief's home to blow out his brains.

So emphatic was the woman, the lieutenant told the chief, that Doughty placed a guard around the house and warned Leahy and Leahy.

"Somebody is always threatening to blow out my brains every couple of months. But this is the first time spirits have been running down the would-be killers."

'Fun' Bridal Winds Up in Reno

The "just for fun" marriage two years ago of beautiful Lorraine Kaufman, heiress to millions, and Stanley G. Harris, son of a wealthy Lynn family, has crashed on the rocks today with the filing of a suit for divorce by Mrs. Harris in Reno.

The bill of complaint, in which Mrs. Harris charges her husband with non-support, constant nagging and abuse, reveals that the domestic troubles of the couple, who eloped to Conway, N. H., after a gay, dancing courtship, started last February.

Harris, who lives at 42 Cherry street, Lynn, has been served with a summons in connection with the suit, which is expected to be heard shortly.

Mrs. Harris asserts in her bill of complaint that a suit for separate support instituted by her husband in February of this year was dismissed in probate court when Harris, through counsel, allegedly attempted to get his wife to settle for $75,000 after an earlier bid of $250,000.

The couple were wed August 11, 1934, slipping out of the Mt. Washington House, Bretton Woods, N. H., while the bride's father, Leon E. Kaufman, of Los Angeles, was taking an afternoon nap.

They started to elope the day previous, but turned back on noting it was the 13th day of the month.

Insurgent Spanish troops smashed at the gates of Toledo today as the wife of President Manuel Azana of Spain is reported taken under the protection of the Argentine embassy.

The correspondent of a Lisbon newspaper reports rebels have entered Toledo.

President Azana was reported authoritatively to have asked for political asylum, if necessary, aboard an Argentine warship.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY CROPS HIT BY FROST

Jack Frost rode through Middlesex County today, leaving destruction to crops, flowers and vegetable life in its wake, as the thermometer dropped to new low marks for this time of year.

In Lexington with the mercury at 26 degrees, crops and flower beds were hit under a layer of frost. Residents were amazed to find water in bird baths frozen.

At the government weather station in Concord the thermometer showed 30 degrees. This is the coldest day for that town since 1929 when it hit a similar low. In 1925 the record was established for this date when the mercury slipped to 26.

Cranberry bogs on the Cape were flooded with water to protect them from the frost as the mercury dropped to 32 degrees.

In Boston the thermometer showed 41, and topcoats were the vogue among early morning risers.

Temperatures that dropped to or below freezing point brought killing frost generally throughout western Massachusetts. Late produce, such as tomatoes, was hard hit.

The official forecast is for fair and warmer weather today with increasing cloudiness followed by showers tomorrow afternoon or night.

Newburyport, Sept. 26 — Two emergency squads chopped away at the wreckage of a 10-ton truck on Newburyport turnpike here today for 20 minutes before they finally reach Carmine Hincok, 35, suffering great pain with a steering-wheel spoke jammed into his chest.

Fully conscious, Hincok was removed from the twisted cab of his truck and rushed to the Anna Jaques hospital where physicians said his condition was serious.

Early morning traffic was paralyzed on the turnpike as motorists parked their cars and joined in the rescue work. Special police squads arrived from the Topsfield barracks and cleared the way for automobiles.

When the truck went into the embankment Hincok was imprisoned by the structure of his cab as it crumpled under the impact. The steering-wheel snapped off and one of the spokes speared the right side of Hincok's chest.

Morgenthau called attention to a paragraph in a Treasury statement issued last night outlining the tripower monetary agreement which said that the United States, France and Great Britain invited "the co-operation" of other nations.

Paris, Sept. 26 (INS)—Tickers were silenced, foreign exchange suspended, and suppressed anxiety reigned in France today as the haughty franc, its golden barking perilously drained away, slithered slowly to level of the lowly nickel.

Hammered by the clamorous protests of France's hoarding millions, who "sailed away" nearly 34,000,000,000 in "works," Premier Leon Blum and his financial advisers speedily proceeded, during the weekend, to the financial chaotic, their program of devaluing the franc by from 25.2 to 34.4 per cent.

Friday's closing in London and New York gave the franc its first official gold quote since the 1914-18 war. It was 43.8 cents. Was given the financial ideal of the end of the 18 years currency "war."

3 POWER ACCORD

Ten weeks of negotiation, then a dramatic midnight series of telephone conversations with Washington and London, led to the three-power accord terminating, for the time being at least, international monetary fluctuations, under a "gentlemen's agreement."

Finance Minister Vincent Auriol announced to an exalted world this morning that Parliament will meet Monday to pass legislation fixing the gold content of the franc at from 43 to 49 milligrams, compared to the present 65.5 milligrams.

This means that the franc, instead of the figure of 6.58 cents around which it has hovered since the United States went off the gold standard, will vary from 4.5 cents to 5 cents in value.

MARKETS CLOSED

Until the franc is fixed at its new level, stock and commodity markets will remain closed, and the Bank of France will deliver no gold.

There were not even unofficial quotations on the franc today, and even petty trading by travelers was almost at a standstill.

Premier Blum in the Chamber of Deputies are believed to be certain of forcing passage of the decree-laws, which will embody the Finance Minister Auriol and Premier Blum have promised steps to "protect the people and small savers, and to prevent a rise in the cost of living index.

Why? How? Of Franc

WHY—Foreign drain on French gold, due to "flight from the franc" and falling French export trade, reduced France's metallic backing and cut gold supply to the minimum needed in the event of war.

HOW—Gold content of France to be cut from 65.5 milligrams in between 43 and 49 milligrams, like President Roosevelt reduced the gold content of the dollar.

FRANC'S VALUE—To be between 4.5 and 5 cents. Was 6 cents before America went off gold, around 6.6 cents since then.

INTERNATIONAL EFFECTS—Stabilizes foreign exchange near figure before America and England devalued. Ends currency "war," eliminates one cause of impelling peace in Europe—but helps French export trade and foreign goods are more costly in France.

U. S., Britain, France Join To Fix Dollar Value

Washington, Sept. 26 (INS)—Paving the way toward world monetary stabilization, the United States, Great Britain and France today adopted a "gentlemen's agreement" fixing the value of the dollar, pound and franc in international exchange.

Climaxing nearly a month of conference with French and British officials, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced the government's approval of franc devaluation and pledged co-operation with the two countries in preventing disturbances in international exchange resulting from the French currency readjustment.

Hailing the agreement as the "turning point for permanent peace in the world," Morgenthau invited every other nation to join the parties in their stabilization.

"The government of the United States, in common with the governments of France and Great Britain, desires and invites the cooperation of the other nations to realize the policy declared in the present declaration," the secretary said.

"It is clear that no country will attempt to obtain an unreasonably competitive exchange advantage and thereby hamper the effort to restore more stable economic relations which it is the aim of the three governments to promote."

In his statement, Morgenthau said the agreement is designed to prevent disturbances in international exchange resulting from the French currency readjustment.

"The government of the United States must, of course, in its policy towards international monetary relations, take into full account the requirements of internal prosperity as corresponding considerations will be taken into account by the governments of France and Great Britain," he asserted.

"If this agreement affects in any way our internal prosperity we will take the proper steps."

While we take pains to assure the United States would further devalue the dollar. Under existing law, the President has the right to cut gold content of the dollar to 50 per cent of its former value. He has already reduced it to 59.6 per cent.

British Suspend Exchange To Balance Franc, Pound

London, Sept. 26 (AP)—The British foreign exchange market suspended transactions today to prepare for adjustment of the pegs of the franc and the dollar to a new level in anticipation of French devaluation.

Officials of the stock and foreign exchange markets said they were uncertain when exchange would be resumed. A meeting of officers of both exchanges was called for 10 a. m. Monday.

Authorities expressed belief operations on Monday were essential to prepare for adjustment of the pegs of the franc and the dollar to a new level in anticipation of French devaluation.

"It is conceivable new machinery for the operation of the foreign exchange market will not be ready to adjust to the new level," said one authority, "but we hope to smooth out the inequalities by Tuesday, when the franc may be quoted."

The foreign exchange suspension was voted at a meeting of the bankers' committee shortly before the usual opening time of the foreign exchange market in London.

There were, however, some unofficial dealings in the United States which set a rate ranging from $4.91 to $4.95. (The London dollar closed yesterday at $5.01¼).

The committees' committee also met and decided not to set a gold price for today's transactions. The members approved a motion to quote only silver.

late warning that the deadly hail would continue until the city surrendered. The fresh ultimatum brought defiant replies from Bolshevist commanders who reaffirmed their intention to hold out to the last ditch.

Basque Nationalists labored to maintain order as the frenzied Anarchists fought to kill the insurgent prisoners in retaliation for the Fascist bombardment which yesterday killed and injured hundreds of persons.

The Basques striving to maintain their control of this Bay of Biscay port, toward which the rebels are driving with hammer-like blows from the east, feared they might be unable to restrain the panic-stricken populace.

Shrieking mobs, surging through Bilbao's streets last night, killed 60 Fascist hostages and forced Eladoro De La Torre, Basque nationalist chief, to promise them the satisfaction they demanded.

While firemen fought to bring order out of the chaos and curb the fires ignited by the roaring two-hour bombardment of eight tri-motored Fascist planes, citizens of Bilbao burrowed into deep cellars to escape the assault expected to be renewed today.

Basque leaders considered attempting to lock up as many of their Anarchist and Communist comrades as they could corral, but feared their action would set off the spark which might destroy the city just as maddened Anarchists facing defeat, sacked Irun as victorious Fascists marched into the city.

Authorities could not hazard a guess on the toll of dead and wounded buried beneath the flaming wreckage. Firemen and militiamen counted 126 dead as they dragged more and more mangled bodies from blasted homes and public buildings.

Women dipped their handkerchiefs in the red blood of the 60 hostages slaughtered by the government leaders in response to the demands of the mob.

The prisoners were taken from ships in the bay where they were held and were cut down by machine guns on the cobblestone dock while citizens milled about shouting their approval.

As the Fascist planes completed their rain of death and sped away unmolested by the government anti-aircraft batteries, thousands of screaming men and women surged on the government buildings.

As the mob grew in size and violence at the provincial parliament building, where the war committee have their offices, De La Tore appeared on a balcony overhanging the Gran Via De Lopez De Haro and shouted they would have the satisfaction they demanded.

Another Fascist column from Maqueda occupied Villamiel and Bargas, approximately five and eight miles north of Toledo.

The insurgent air squadrons reported swift fighting planes from the base at Caceres shot down three government planes which were attempting to prevent Fascist bombers from staging an aerial attack on marching Socialists.

The swiftly advancing troops of General Franco moved down the secondary road from Maqueda, striking northward from Madrid-Toledo fork of the highway from the capital to Talavera de la Reina.

Bitter battles raged in the air between Fascist and government warcraft at Torrijos, west of here and on the highway to Toledo. The Hargas rail center was bombed by Fascist planes, but apparently the government held its ground.

Fascist forces, the government believed, were cut off from the Maqueda junction, its two-pronged highway forking northward 45 miles to Madrid and westward to Toledo 28 miles away.

Red President Asks Asylum on Warship

Buenos Aires, Sept. 26 (AP)—Informed sources said today the wife of President Manuel Azana of Spain, the daughter of Indalecio Prieto, Minister of War and Navy, and other relatives of Madrid cabinet members had been taken under the protection of the Argentine embassy.

They were being taken to the Port of Alicante to go aboard an Argentine cruiser, after Azana, himself, was stated authentically to have asked for political asylum aboard the warship.

It was indicated in exile-official reports, that Azana and other members of the government had asked for the right of asylum from the Argentine charge d'affairs, first for their families and then for themselves, if they should need it.

The embassy, these reports stated, already has taken Senora Azana and Senorita Prieto under its protection, with the wives and daughters of other members of the government.

MOROCCAN TROOPS REBELS' CHIEF HOPE FOR VICTORY

(Editor's note: Following is the twelfth of the war logs sent from the Spanish battlefront by H. R. Knickerbocker, famous roving correspondent of International News Service.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

Trujillo, Sept. 26—I noticed particularly this morning how picturesque the officers of the Fifth Tabor of Regulars, native Moroccans, looked as they came up to our hotel and took seats in the sidewalk cafe to wait for Lieutenant-Colonel Delgado.

The officers all have a faint swagger, and they wear their scarlet-topped caps a little cocked on one side, and they look as if they were looking for trouble.

Sought Pass

I was looking for a pass to the front, and couldn't get it. I asked one of the Regulares officers which were better troops, the Regulares or the Foreign Legion. He made a deprecating motion of the hand and said "No difference; both good." Later on I had a chance to ask a Legion officer the same thing, and he laughed at the very idea—"The Legion, of course," he said. Nevertheless these Moroccans look good.

Their discipline is certainly excellent, as far as one can observe under the circumstances in this town. The story published in some foreign newspapers that the savage Moroccans had become so ferocious upon storming Badajos that their officers actually got scared and took their arms away from them at night, is palpably absurd.

If the Moroccans are scared of anything, it is of their officers. They salute in the most conscientious fashion. I have seen them bring up the hand to salute and keep it there for, thirty fast as they walk past an officer standing with his back toward them.

Pizarro Statue

Presently Lt. Col. Delgado came up, and we asked him again about our pass. He said some more he would have to telephone headquarters. Then he and his officers all went over by the big square by the statue of Pizarro.

Pizarro, who four hundred years ago marched into Peru and conquered the Incas, natives of the New World with a handful of men and a hearful of courage, was born in this town. Mr. James Rumsey Pizillo waited 400 years to remember him properly. And then it took an American. Mr. James Rumsey of New York was responsible for the great bronze statue standing here in the square, showing Pizarro mounted on a stallion with his plumed helmet standing out against the blue Spanish sky. Mrs. Rumsey was the statue in Trujillo in 1927.

But I was not interested in Pizarro. I was interested in a certain Lieutenant-Colonel Yague, commander of all the Foreign Legion at the front—the real front, the front where the war is going to be won or lost—the front where General Franco, the generalissimo-chief, is making the most serious drive upon Madrid, past or through Toledo, while General Mola in the north holds the passes. Lieutenant-Colonel Yague, I knew, was in Navalmoral, just 40 miles up the road on the way to the front, but Lieutenant-Colonel Delgado would not allow me to go there.

Hears Siren

I saw the Regulares officers follow Delgado to the square. I went up to my room to do a warlog. I was just settling down to work when I heard the most ear-splitting siren that ever cracked an eardrum. It sounded like a Chicago police car. I ran to the window. There, coming down the street at not less than 65 miles an hour was a armored car.

But such an armored car! It was forest green, and it pulled up to the curb like a racing automobile, and its tires were not armored because they were big superballoon of solid rubber. It had a turret in the middle, and the turret opened and a huge machinegun popped out and started to dive at the crowd.

A man in a steel helmet twirled the turret around. The man at the driver's seat opened the door. He had been driving with a solid plate of steel in front of his eyes but he could see the road as well as if the plate had been glass, because a set of periscopes let him the way right through the steel.

Reds' Truck

I said to Arthur Menken, "My Lord, what an armored car!" I compared it in my mind with the pathetic makeshift I saw captured from the Reds up at Tolosa, on the San Sebastian front. That poor thing had been hacked together out of an old truck and lot of quarter-inch ship's plate, and its armor had been pierced by a hundred White machine-gun bullets like pushing pencils through butter.

The Red car had "agora on its side "Hurrah for Anarchy!" The little wasp of the Whites had nothing on a 37 mm. gun. But if it was death on wheels—imagine an armored car making 65 miles an hour!

German Made

We learned later this armored car had been manufactured by a German concern in Portugal. But just then another car pulled up and out jumped a broad-shouldered, tall, white-haired man with the two big gold 13-pointed stars of a lieutenant-colonel. "That's Yague!" Menken yelled, and grabbed his camera. We pushed through the crowd around Yague, and I showed him my pass, leaving it to the discretion of the commander of the column whether to let me go to the front.

"Why certainly! Come up and see me tomorrow at Navalmoral," said the Lieutenant-Colonel Juan Yague Blanco, commander of the first and inspector of the first and second legions.

JAPAN TO HOLD YEN STEADY

Tokyo, Sept. 26 (INS)—Japanese financiers received with approval today London hints that devaluation of the French franc may be the precursor of a REAL economic and financial conference, but stressed that such an international parley would be futile unless the Dutch guilder also goes off gold.

The yen, already greatly inflated, will continue to remain a "major change in the dollar or sterling occure," authorities said.

Poland to Join Monetary Accord

Warsaw, Sept. 26 (AP)—Poland will not devaluate because of the action of France, Finance Minister Kwiatkowski announced today, but it stands ready to join the international monetary agreement.

He said Poland possesses sufficient gold to maintain the parity of the zloty, but the devaluation of French francs held here is too small to cause important loss.

Belgium Won't Devaluate Again

Brussels, Sept. 26 (INS)—Belgium's currency, devalued 18 months ago, will remain unaltered in the wake of French devaluation, Premier Paul Van Zeeland announced today.

Belgium welcomes the French move, said the premier in an official statement, and is prepared to join an international stabilization agreement.

Italy Hesitates On Devaluation

Rome, Sept. 26 (AP)—Opinion in Italian financial circles was divided today as to whether the lira would be devalued as a result of proposed devaluation of the French franc.

A slight majority of those whose opinions were requested said they believed the value of the lira might be reduced.

Berlin, Sept. 26 (INS)—The Berlin Boerse was calm today with 2 and 3 point advances recorded in most issues.

Financial quarters were reticent to discuss the monetary agreement between Britain, France and the United States pending further study, but sources close to the finance ministry indicated Germany would be willing to participate in a stabilization conference if such a meeting materializes.

Kansan Named War Secretary

HARRY H. WOODRING

Anti-Red Rally Called in Danzig

Free City of Danzig, Sept. 26 (AP)—A big Nazi rally, like the one at Germany's Nurnberg, but on a smaller scale, was called today for Oct. 2 to 4.

Its slogan, also following the example of Nurnberg, will be "Fight Against Bolshevism."

NEW WAR CHIEF PLEDGES U. S. DEFENSE

Washington, Sept. 26 (AP)—Pledged to "an adequate national defense in the interest of peace," Harry H. Woodring, a World War veteran, prepared today to take office as Secretary of War.

Still in his forties, the Kansan takes command of the nation's land defenses at a time when military officials are expending one of the largest peace-time appropriations in history.

President Roosevelt announced the temporary elevation of the acting secretary to full power over the nation's war machine at the Hyde Park, N. Y., summer White House last night. Woodring succeeds George H. Dern, of Utah, who died late last month.

Whether Woodring, former Governor of Kansas, will be given the post permanently, or whether a new Secretary of War will be named later was not revealed.

Woodring has served as acting head of the War Department for many months, while Dern was too ill to work.

EXPRESS GRATITUDE

Expressing gratitude for the President's "confidence," Woodring announced he would seek to carry out the policies of Dern.

"If I may do anything to further round an adequate national defense in the interest of peace for our nation I shall feel repaid for every effort," he said.

A banker, Woodring retired from active business in 1928. His first political venture took him into the governorship of Kansas in 1930. Defeated for re-election by Alfred M. Landon, present Republican candidate for President, Woodring joined the Roosevelt "Little Cabinet" as assistant secretary of war in 1933.

He was one of the capital's most eligible bachelors then, but in July, 1933, Woodring married Miss Helen Coolidge, daughter of Senator Marcus Coolidge of Massachusetts. They have a son, Marcus, and a daughter, Melissa.

BEGAN WORK AT 16

Born in Elk City, Kans., on May 31, 1890, the son of a Kentucky veteran of the Union Army, Woodring started working in a bank as errand boy and janitor at the age of 16. Within a year, he was bookkeeper, and in two more years became assistant cashier. Meanwhile, he was attending Elk City High school and Lebanon University.

Entering the army as an enlisted man during the war, Woodring emerged as a first lieutenant.

After the war, he served for a time as assistant cashier of the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City. Later, he joined with relatives in buying control of the First National Bank of Coffeyville, Kans. He sold his interest in 1928.

tower, and if it seemed too powerful, all the inhabitants fled into the hills and forests, taking their most valuable possessions, to hide until the enemy had gone.

If the enemy was not too strong and the people on the mound had a brave leader, there might be a fight, with victory for the peaceful natives, and those the fighting princes and barons built themselves up on reputation for killing.

Such lookout towers are everywhere, scores of them; they are on every headland on the magnificent road that Mussolini has built from Naples south all down the coast. They are scattered on the hilltops along the inland roads of Italy.

Their builders, the men that fought in them, and the unknown millions that died near them are forgotten. Real remembered of them all is one tower.

That tower that will outlive all the others in the minds of men was called the Gualandi, afterwards called "The Tower of Hunger," because the Admiral Count Ugolino Della Gherardesca was imprisoned in the tower with his sons and his grandsons, the key of the tower thrown into the river Arno.

The unfortunate Count Ugolino and the sons and grandsons all died from starvation, because he was accused of treason to the city of Pisa, in the battle of Meloria, fought in 1284.

In the battle, the city of Pisa, an independent republic, had been defeated by the Genoese from a nearby city, with a separate government and a separate hatred. It is probable that the Pisans really selected the unfortunate Ugolino and starved him as a scapegoat because of their humiliation in defeat. There was and is nothing new about the scapegoat idea. The history of Italy and of most other countries shows many cases of such popular vengeance.

Ugolino and his tower of famine would long since have been forgotten, with many others, except that the great Italian genius Dante objected to Ugolino's punishment and denounced it.

Well-educated Italians, who happen to see this column, will remember Dante's words:

Ahi Pisa, vituperio delle genti
Del bel paese ov'ai sì
Poi che i vicini a te non si muovano
E tuttavia ti stanno

Starving the Count Ugolino family seems to have been an unfortunate thing for Pisa, just as other wise, Mussolini fell upon the independent city, the sea abandoned it, moving out several miles, so that the port of Pisa, now is Leghorn or Livorno. Members of the Gherardesca family, to which the starved Ugolino belonged, ruled in turn with other families, civil war prevailed, the horrible plague that in some places killed 75 out of 100 inhabitants, made the disaster complete.

Powerful Florence, the inland city on the Arno, fighting as the other cities did against each other, conquered Pisa finally.

The last hope of Pisa died when the French king, Charles the Eighth, took their city, promised them freedom and freedom and then, in return for a considerable cash payment, turned over unfortunate Pisa to his cruelest enemy, Florence, who was quite in the nature of ancient kings.

Pisa fought desperately, stood a long siege but lost, and the courageous fighting city is taking on a new life now like the rest of Italy, with Mussolini making everybody work and at least look cheerful, if he does not feel so.

When you go to Italy you must take your big or your little car to Pisa, which now relies largely for prosperity on visitors, upon the leaning tower, of which every school child has heard and the very interesting old seminary with such vivid pictures of hell and its punishment on the walls as would make an true believer behave himself.

More about Pisa. You should see it, with the rest of Italy.

FRIENDS Of Wellesley LONELY

NEW PRESIDENT MOURNS OLD

At impressive ceremonies in the high-vaulted solemnity of the Gothic chapel on the campus of Wellesley College, President Mildred Helen McAfee today made her first formal appearance before 1450 students to open the 62d session of the institution.

In paying tribute to former President Ellen Fitz Pendleton who retired and died last year, the new president said:

"The beginning of the year finds all friends of Wellesley conscious of a great loneliness. I feel sure that for many of us it has been accentuated today because this formal chapel has been so peculiarly Miss Pendleton.

To Students

"It would be untrue to her to let our loneliness fail to stimulate us to a rededication of ourselves and of her college and the cause which she lived so triumphly for."

To the seniors in their caps and gowns President McAfee said:

"You are probably not as much impressed by your caps and gowns as you expected to be, but you are distinctly impressionable to us."

To the graduate students as a whole she said:

"Some of you are for the first time finding yourself as assets, and more unchaperoned than you've ever been before."

To freshmen, President McAfee concluded:

"Overnight from high school girls you have become college women."

Wellesley Code

President McAfee told the students and faculty that she had found four strands of Wellesley tradition.

Appreciation of beauty; a passionate search for truth; respect for personality, and a desire for that way of life that many like to call Christ-like.

Reminding the newcomers Dean Mary Lowell Coolidge awarded prizes to the upperclass students and read the names of honor students in the senior year.

Baby Girl Found Abandoned in Westerly Auto

Westerly, R. I., Sept. 26—A three weeks' old girl, abandoned in the rear seat of a parked car in Summer street, was saved from death from exposure today by two school children, attracted by cries.

With little clothing, the baby apparently had been abandoned in the cold, as the first chill of fall frosted the windows of the car.

The baby was clad in a new bonnet, new booties and a blanket wrapped carelessly about its shivering body.

The two children, Lena Foley, 12, and Elaine Borden, 12, walking along Summer street, heard the baby's crying and peeked in at the window of the automobile.

Startled by what they saw, they rushed into the house in front of which the car was parked, where the owner, Russell Brown, 18, was visiting Marion Davis, 25.

The couple took the baby into the house and notified police. Officer Edward Lallo sped to the home of Miss Davis and the abandoned babe was removed to the Westerly Hospital.

FIRE Fails to Halt CLASSES

HIGH SCHOOL OPEN MONDAY

Bad news came to Brookline high school students today with the announcement that, despite the $350,000 fire in which 15 firemen were overcome or injured, school sessions would be held as usual Monday.

Laboratories, the auditorium and other space in the new section of the high school plant, which escaped the flames unscathed, will be pressed into service to accommodate the students.

School authorities also announced they have been forced the use of the auditorium of Temple Ohabei Shalom in Beacon street until other arrangements can be made for handling a number of students.

All Recover

Fire officials believe the blaze was caused by an explosion in the supply of paint which was stored in a blind alley under the roof.

The flames spread rapidly and it was necessary to sound a general alarm in order to control the blaze.

The firemen overcome fighting the blaze were practically recovered today.

Twelve others are under treatment at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital but all are expected to recover from their injuries, doctors said.

Pneumonia Perils Beaten Actress

Fourth Chicago Victim

ALDA DEERY

Choked in Hotel and Attacked

Chicago, Sept. 26 (AP)—Miss Alda Deery, 23, pretty brunette vaudeville performer who was beaten, choked and attacked in Chicago's fourth downtown hotel assault in less than six months, lay seriously ill of pneumonia in the County Hospital today as police sought her assailant.

Only the fact that her attacker started a fire in the clothes closet of her top hotel room in an apparent effort to conceal the crime yesterday, saved her from death, police believed.

Her roommate and fellow performer, blonde Dorothy Ryan, visiting in an adjoining room, smelled smoke and rushed in to find Miss Deery unconscious, severely beaten and a stocking knotted around her neck.

Miss Deery, a resident of New York and member of a comedy team playing in a West Side theater, said when she regained consciousness she had gone to a tavern Thursday night with a friend, whom she refused to name. They returned to her hotel late, and her friend left. She was unable to remember more, she said.

Miss Ryan said Miss Deery came in about four a. m. entered the room of Joe Morris, leader of the troupe, whom Miss Ryan was visiting, and then went to her own room.

SUNKEN Millions FOUND

BIG TREASURE IN EAST RIVER

New York, Sept. 26 (US)—The strangest treasure hunt in American history is believed to have ended in success with discovery at the bottom of the East River of the hulk of the British frigate Hussar, it has been revealed by Simon Lake, submarine inventor.

The ship, reputedly carrying from $1,800,000 to $4,800,000 in gold and silver specie for the payment of redcoats quartered in New York, struck a reef and sank in the swirling waters just above Hell Gate in 1780.

For 150 years this lost fortune eluded all efforts of divers and other salvage experts to find it.

But Lake, 70-year-old Connecticut Yankee, believes his specially contrived bottom-marching submarine has done the trick at last. After three and a half years of work, the inventor and his underwater crew came upon a hulk they are confident is that of the Hussar. The exact location of the long submerged frigate remains a carefully guarded secret.

Lake revealed there is a plan under discussion to raise the old full-rigged 20-ton frigate for exhibition at the 1939 World's Fair, adding:

"This I believe is possible, as from my probing I believe the hulk is practically intact.

"Ships have been uncovered that were known to be over 2000 years old and when covered with silt were in good condition."

About 12 feet of silt covers the entire hulk of The Hussar, Lake said.

Under the terms of the contract the finder will receive 50 per cent of whatever treasure may be aboard the frigate and the government 10 per cent.

TWO HERE, DENY ENGAGEMENT

JUDY STEWART

She is charming, she is fascinating and she is a great friend—but that's as far as it goes.

They are just very good friends. He has a lot of girl friends, and she is one of them.

Statement one come from Rudy Vallee, and statement two is from Judy Stewart as a result of renewed reports that the couple were engaged and that the famous crooner was soon to wed the Follies beauty.

The latest report grew out of the presence of a beautiful diamond ring on Miss Stewart's finger, a visit by the crooner to watch the Follies beauty perform and a wedding breakfast following the show at a Boston theater.

LANDON HAILED BY WISCONSIN; LASHES DEAL

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Correspondent

Oshkosh, Wis., Sept. 26—Cheered by enthusiastic ovations across Wisconsin, stronghold of the La Follette Progressive movement, Governor Alfred M. Landon today resumed his journey toward Milwaukee for a smashing attack tonight on the Roosevelt social security program and presentation of a Republican "common sense" plan for relieving old age and unemployment distress.

The Republican nominee was the smiling recipient of assurance from scores of state and local G.O.P. leaders that he would carry Wisconsin in November. He was told his new national farm relief program and pledge to revise the Roosevelt foreign trading agreements to protect American farmers would win him the northwest.

As his Sunflower Special rolled across the Wisconsin dairy lands, Landon time and again denounced the Roosevelt administration for "destroying the farmer's foreign markets while opening his domestic markets to foreign farm products." This accusation won him repeated applause.

PLAYS DEAL'S WASTE

So too did his frequent assaults upon waste, absurdities and partisanship in the administration of Federal unemployment relief.

Republican chieftains in Wisconsin were jubilant over the receptions accorded him. They declared only the late elder Robert M. La Follette had whipped up such enthusiasm in either the rural sections or the smaller cities.

Edgar J. Sampe, state chairman said:

"Landon has won Wisconsin by his remarkable understanding of the farm problem and his enlightened program for the future."

Former Governor Walter J. Kohler said:

"I've never seen anything like the enthusiasm for Landon. He's going to carry Wisconsin in November."

While here, the Republican nominee made his first speaking engagement for after the election—"if he's elected President." A delegation from Ripon, Wis., which claims to be the birthplace of the Republican party, invited him to visit that city on his present tour. He was forced to decline.

AFTER HE'S ELECTED

Then a spokesman asked:

"Will you come if elected President?"

"I will, I'll come then," replied Landon. "That's a promise."

In Milwaukee tonight, Governor Landon will deal with social security, a problem he has studied for 18 months. He has come to the deliberate conclusions that the present social security program is unworkable and will say so in unmistakable terms. But he will offer a Republican substitute for each phase of the present law, which deals with unemployment insurance, old age pensions and help for the needy and blind.

His speech at 8:30 p. m. (C. S. T.) (10:30 Boston time) will be broadcast.

Landon will spend Sunday with his friend, former Governor Frank O. Lowden, at the latter's Sinissippi farm, near Byron, Ill. Landon conferred with the former Illinois governor several times before determining his farm relief program. On this visit, however, politics will be barred under Landon's rule to transact no political or other business on Sundays.

Wallace Attacks Landon Farm Plan

Washington, Sept. 26 (USA)—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace attacked Governor Alfred M. Landon's farm program, as enunciated in his Des Moines speech.

In a radio broadcast under auspices of the Democratic national committee, Wallace charged "his major proposal would bring the farmers back to 1932 with the greatest possible speed."

Taking wheat as an example, Wallace said:

"To lift farmers' returns, Mr. Landon would pay a 'tariff equivalent' presumably of 42 cents a bushel, on two-thirds of each farmers' crop. The cost to the treasury alone would be about 265 million dollars.

"Mr. Landon's plan would subsidize agriculture to keep on expanding, and to go right on piling up wheat on top of the big supply accumulated the first year.

"The plan could not possibly last through two years of ordinary weather. Some time in the second year the crash would come."

'ROOSEVELT WELCOMES RED AID'---COUGHLIN

Philadelphia, Sept. 26 (INS)—Father Charles E. Coughlin, here for a rally of the National Union for Social Justice, today accused President Franklin D. Roosevelt of welcoming Communist support in his campaign for re-election.

He termed Roosevelt a "great victim" of the "litany of the pinks," and in the "litany" he included Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Rexford Tugwell and others closely associated with the administration.

Waving aside reports from Rome that he is due for a rebuff from the Vatican for his criticism of Mr. Roosevelt, Father Coughlin reiterated he will continue as in the past, "until muzzled."

"I am going to continue fighting for a principle to save America. Christianity and capitalism, and I'll never stop till they muzzle me," the priest said.

The Detroit priest ridiculed the recent White House statement that the President was not looking for Communist help, issued over the signature of Stephen T. Early, of the President's secretarial staff.

"The Early statement represents nothing," Father Coughlin challenged. "I say that Mr. Roosevelt has welcomed the aid of the Communists, otherwise James Aloysius Farley would not have put his benediction on Dubinsky. Mr. Roosevelt can't deny it; the proof is there. Factual evidence, not circumstantial evidence."

Council Fights Curley Choice for McGlue Job

from a member of that political which is doing nothing to quiet the whispering campaign that Governor Landon is unfriendly to the Jewish people.

"There is no need of haste by the Governor in which he is endeavoring to place another henchman in McGlue's shoes.

"In McGlue's blustering splurge to clean up the voting lists, he might well have turned his attention to the deplorable conditions in Wards 21 and 22 of this city, instead of throwing up a smoke screen.

"Attention has been directed publicly to the false registration in these wards, but we hear nothing from McGlue.

"I state here and now that I'm opposed to any action today by the council."

BREAK WITH DEVER

It was understood that Brooks would ask for an immediate adjournment when the governor confers the special session.

Meanwhile an open break between Governor Curley and Attorney-General Paul A. Dever appeared inevitable as the "sister" of McGlue brought the two to verbal swords-pointe.

Reports of the imminent break between the governor and attorney-general were based on previous strain caused by Dever's caustic criticism which brought cancellation of the Quabbin "gift" contracts and his insistence on observing an agreement of counsel on temporary halting of the Ballot Law Commission's hearing on independent candidacies.

Following a conference with the attorney general, McGlue stated publicly he would not resign.

A few hours after this statement, the attorney general's office was notified of the filing of the resignation with the Governor.

The Governor's acceptance of the resignation and his naming of Attorney Glynn of Jamaica Plain followed. Glynn at the present time holds a position with the Herman Nelson Heating and Ventilating Company.

While criticism of the attorney general was heard on some sides, in many quarters his actions were being praised as "courageous."

McGlue's fall from grace came on the heels of the discovery that Alonzo B. Cook, independent candidate for senator, and for many years Republican state auditor, but now holding down a job given him by Governor Curley in the state tax division, had protested the Republican nomination papers of Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Beverly, for United States senator.

LODGE VS. COOK

This protest was based mainly on the right of Lodge to use the "Junior," which, it developed, appears on the birth records.

Lodge, endorsed by the Republican pre-primary convention in Springfield, was nominated in the primary by a tremendous vote of 250,000. Cook, running against Lodge for this nomination, received but 40,000.

McGlue had set the date for the hearing for today but a restraining order, asked for by counsel representing Lodge, was issued by the court.

McGlue's right to sit on the commission had been challenged on the ground that he had served on the state committee and on the Citizens Security committee while a member of the state ballot law commission contrary to law. From both these committees McGlue had subsequently resigned.

GREENWOOD STICKS

McGlue's resignation does not affect the restraining orders, filed by O'Brien, Mayor Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg and Lodge.

The Supreme Court will hear arguments on behalf of all three and several others on Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Mayor Greenwood, also an independent candidate for United States Senator, whose withdrawal from the race was predicted if McGlue resigned, has no thought of giving up the contest, he said.

"Why should I?" Greenwood asked. "McGlue's resignation simply shows his sensibilities are Governor. I would be fully satisfied if Governor Curley should now resign.

A statement released by the Attorney General after receipt of notice of McGlue's resignation, explained that he originally decided it was not expedient for him to render a decision on an application filed by Greenwood asking him to institute proceedings to oust McGlue until another case against McGlue was reached in court, which had been continued until next Tuesday.

Quabbin Cancellation "Saved State $400,000"

At a big Republican rally, which was preceded by a torchlight parade in Danvers, Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, candidate for lieutenant-governor, gave credit to "an aroused public opinion" for the blocking of the "gift" contracts at the Quabbin dam.

The cancelling of these two contracts, he pointed out, saved the "state treasury from a $400,000 raid."

"You voters may congratulate yourselves for rallying behind the men who exposed that disgraceful deal through which irresponsible public officials would further burden the citizens they are supposed to serve."

He warned his hearers that they have "not the slightest assurance" of protection in the immediate future "against more secret and outrageous manipulations at their expense."

$65,000,000, and much of that still remains to be spent."

NEW YORK VOTE SHOWS SWING TO LANDON

By ARCHIBALD M. CROSSLEY

New York, Sept. 26—A New York City trend of the utmost importance was disclosed today by the new crop of sample ballots gathered by the investigators for the Crossley poll.

This is a growth in the Landon minority, probably strong enough if it continues until election to shift New York State, with its 47 electoral votes, into the Landon column.

Since New York State's relatively huge block of electoral votes is regarded in political circles as very likely to be the determining factor in the Presidential election, the importance of this pro-Landon trend in the city is obvious.

Our new figures reveal Landon as an 11 per cent stronger candidate than Hoover, in the metropolis, and as a candidate 19 per cent stronger than was Donovan, in 1932, for governr.

NEEDS GAIN 75,000

Taken together with the poll in upstate New York which shows Landon consistently leading, the new statistics indicate that Landon has but about 75,000 votes in the whole of New York to gain in order to carry the state.

Especial care was given to our poll in New York City, due to the realization that it is probably the nation's outstanding pivotal point.

Traditionally Democratic, the city gave Roosevelt a majority of 871,120 votes over Hoover in 1928, and Lehman a majority of 989,844 votes over Donovan in 1932—out of a total of a little more than two million major-party votes. These overcame the upstate Republican majority sufficiently to carry the state.

NEEDS POINT GAIN

Reduced to percentages, Hoover polled 28 per cent and Donovan 26 per cent of the New York city vote.

But Landon is now revealed as having 31 per cent of the city's major-party voters; and the cross-section of the voting groups on which this sample ballot was taken is calculated with extreme care.

In totals of the Crossley poll published September 13, Landon had but 27 per cent of the New York city vote—one point weaker than Hoover, one point stronger than Donovan.

But last Sunday's figures showed 30 per cent of the New York city vote for Landon, and it was apparent a trend had been formed. This has continued; the new totals compiled today give Landon 31 per cent.

He need gain but one additional point and a fraction in the state to the 50-50 mark to throw the state into the Landon column of the poll. Meanwhile, Landon's majorities in upstate New York, larger than Hoover's or Donovan's to begin with, are holding with extraordinary consistency as the "undecided" vote falls into place.

THE RETORT by William Randolph Hearst in the latest inter-change between him and the White House leaves the publisher with the honors.

Using a secretary as "official spokesman," President Roosevelt, without mentioning Mr. Hearst by name, undertook to answer that gentleman's assertion that he is getting Communistic support for re-election.

With characteristic obliqueness, the President undertook to "reply" by "answering" a charge Mr. Hearst never made, as a look at the record will show.

THE "denial" made through the secretary contained a statement that the President does not "passively accept" the support of alien organizations hostile to the American form of government, and an assertion that the President does not welcome such support or vote.

Mr. Hearst points out that he never tried to interpret the President's mind or desire, but that as a matter of fact Mr. Roosevelt does get Red support whether he desires it or not and has "done his utmost in act and utterance while in office to secure and justify it."

So the publisher gives the President a little lesson in exactitude of thought and utterance which the pupil will not appreciate, but which many others may.

ROOSEVELT IN DRIVE TO WIN OWN STATE

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 26 (INS)—President Roosevelt probed further into the political situation today as he rounded out his campaign plans for the final month's drive to election day.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, one of the leaders of the liberal group organized by the LaFollettes of Wisconsin and others in behalf of the president's candidacy, has been invited here for report and suggestions on the task of rolling up a sufficiently large Democratic majority in New York City to offset the Republican sweep from up state.

The President also interested himself in affairs in his own congressional district. Alpha Whiton, Democratic candidate against Representative Hamilton Fish, has an appointment at the summer White House together with James Townsend, Dutchess County leader, and Elmer Vanwagner, Hyde Park town supervisor.

Feeling he is entitled to take an active part in elections in his own state, the President has publicly endorsed Whiton's candidacy. It is an open secret that the New Dealers would particularly like to beat Fish, although they are none too hopeful.

THE CRISIS IN PALESTINE

Reported by the UNOFFICIAL SENATORIAL COMMISSION JUST BACK FROM THE HOLY LAND

ROYAL S. COPELAND
Senator from New York

WARREN R. AUSTIN
Senator from Vermont

DANIEL O. HASTINGS
Senator from Delaware

Palestine has been in the grip of terrorists for five months. Nearly 1,000 lives have been lost in the strife. The British Government is rushing thousands of additional soldiers to the scene. The threat of martial law hangs over the Holy Land.

What is going on in Palestine today?

What is behind the Arab reign of terror?

Are American nationals safe in the Holy Land?

What progress have the Jewish people made in redeeming their ancient land?

How is the Mandate for Palestine, guaranteeing a Jewish National Home, being administered by Great Britain?

What should the United States Government, which formally consented to the British Mandate for Palestine, do in the present crisis?

How many millions of Jewish immigrants and pioneers can Palestine absorb, in addition to the 400,000 Jewish settlers already there?

Does Transjordania, recognized by the United States as an integral part of Palestine under the Mandate, offer a solution to the problem of Jewish immigration?

What of the future of the Jewish National Home, and what are the prospects for a lasting peace between the Jews and Arabs in Palestine?

These and many other vital questions on the Palestine crisis are answered from first-hand observation by Senators Royal S. Copeland of New York, Warren R. Austin of Vermont, and Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, members of the Heart Unofficial Senatorial Commission . . . in an important series of articles.

939 REGISTER ON FIRST DAY AT HARVARD

John Pierpont Morgan, 24, grandson of the late James Pierpont Morgan, and Daniel S. Roosevelt, a cousin of the President, were among the 939 freshmen becoming acquainted with Harvard University life and Cambridge today.

The class of 1940, first in Harvard's fourth century of existence, will number 1005 by the time courses start next Wednesday and Thursday. Total enrollment of the University will be about 8000.

Roosevelt and Morgan were among the 939 who registered for the freshman class at Memorial Hall. Observation of the Jewish holiday kept others away.

Forty-four states and six foreign countries were represented in the freshman enrollment. Foreign students came from Switzerland, China, Venezuela, Germany, Liechtenstein and two from France.

Massachusetts tops all states in new entrants with 434 at Harvard. New York entered 172, Pennsylvania 58, Illinois 33, New Jersey 30, Ohio 29, and Connecticut 25.

COL. GREEN'S ROMANCE

Court Orders Secrets Revealed

Poet Henry, N. Y., Sept. 26 (AP)—The way was cleared today for court inspection of the romance that led to the marriage of Col. Edward H. R. Green, railroad builder and philanthropist, and the elderly Mabel Harlow of Chicago.

The decision to examine the love affair that appeared in the Green household during the world war was made yesterday by Surrogate Harry E. Owen of Essex county, after Mrs. Green had charged in a public hearing she had been tricked into signing a pre-nuptial agreement in 1917.

The agreement stipulated that the bride-to-be would receive $625,000 in cash and securities, and an $18,000 annuity in exchange for a promise never to make further claim on the Green fortune, which is now estimated to approximate $50,000,000.

The Green fortune was amassed by Hetty Green, financial genius, who ran a rather modest New England inheritance into many millions by matching her wits with the shrewdest capitalists in Wall Street during the post-Civil War era.

She did not marry until middle life, and her son promised never to wed so long as she lived. Green kept the promise, marrying in 1917, soon after Hetty Green died. Meanwhile he continued to pile up millions.

Led by former Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania, attorneys for Mrs. Mabel Green argued that she may not have known she was signing away her rights as a wife and may have been ignorant of the vast amount of wealth she was turning her back upon.

New Crop Defies Bugs And Drouth

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26 (AP)—Ellsbery O'Hair, employe in the State Department of Agriculture today claimed he and his father, H. Z. O'Hair of Hushion, Ill., have succeeded in growing a grain and forage crop which defies drought, heat, grasshoppers and chinchbugs.

He said it was the first time the crop, a hybrid of three cross pollenations of varieties of Kaffir corn and ribbon cane, had been grown in the midwestern corn belt.

"It was a complete success," O'Hair said. "We secured 75 bushels to an acre on a 10 acre field which received only 8 inches of rainfall from May 1 to Aug. 31.

"The grain is heavy in protein and fat. Cattle ate it readily. In addition, the fodder, sweet and moist, amounted to 13 tons to an acre."

At the trial of her brothers, Arthur and Daniel, the state charged the Lakes were killed in a raid on their backwoods home at Pacific Junction to kidnap Betty. State's attorneys alleged Mrs. May Bannister, mother of the three, hoped to extort money from two men by pretending the baby was her own.

The Bannister boys were hanged, back to back, Wednesday. Mrs. Bannister is serving a prison term.

Suggest Lynn WPA Golden Roads, Parks

With $419,852 of Works Progress Administration funds for the construction of state highways in their possession, Mayor J. Fred Manning, of Lynn, and Street Superintendent Thomas Smith, wondered what to do with it.

Here's what they're up against:

Lynn has only three miles of state highways in the city. They are all in excellent condition, and newly paved.

Of course they could set hundreds of men to work digging up the new state highways and refinishing them, but that seems sort of silly.

As usual the grant of federal funds carries with it the order that the money must be used for the project specified.

Said Mayor Manning and Superintendent Smith in joint conference:

"We've got enough money now to goldplate every state highway and most of the parks in Lynn. Just how we'll ever be able to spend all this money is beyond us. Our highways are newly paved and in perfect condition."

Last reports showed that the mayor and his aide were reading up on the doings of King Midas, in an effort to solve their monetary puzzle.

Berkeley Freed In Auto Fatality

Los Angeles, Sept. 26 (AP)—Busby Berkeley, film dance director, had a clean slate today, freed of the second degree murder charges which hung over him for nearly a year.

A superior court jury in his third trial acquitted him last night after deliberations of an hour and a half.

Berkeley was accused of murder for precipitating a three-car collision the night of Sept. 8, 1935, in which William Von Brieson, Mrs. Ada Von Brieson and Dorothea Daley lost their lives. Two previous juries disagreed.

Berkeley wept when the verdict was read.

"Thank God—Justice at last," he said.

"I liked Ralph from the first time I met him, and I know he liked me. But, when he asked for my telephone number, I was completely embarrassed."

"We had no home telephone, and where I work there's a rule against social telephoning. What could I do? I waited and waited for him to call around, or write to me."

"My girl friend gave me the tip I needed—'Men don't ring door bells any more,' she told me. 'Your family really needs a telephone, anyway. Sell them the idea.'"

"I did, and what a change it's made in my life. What's more, my family appreciates the telephone now as much as I do. As for Ralph and me—well, you saw the ring!"

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CLIMB DOWN off your high-heeled shoes and take a walk, which is not only one of the best possible exercises for your figure, but also one of the easiest to put into regular practice, and that's important.

At this season of the year, the tang and crispness in the air lure you out into the open. You feel like stepping along for the sheer joy of living, and, as a result, you experience the exhilarating effects of an exercise that compels you to fill your lungs with oxygen and breathe to capacity.

You know, by now, that oxygen is used only on demand of the muscles, but a brisk walk puts all your figure-controlling muscles to work and forces you to breathe properly.

How you walk, of course, determines the benefit you receive from this exercise, and it will be worth your while to check your posture occasionally. Walk right up to the wall until your toes, chin and nose are touching it.

Or, if you prefer, take the suggestion of an artist to his models and stand with your back to the wall so that your weight is supported by your shoulders and head as well as your feet which are a few inches from the wall base. Then, with the back of your head, push yourself away.

FOR FAT OR THIN

As you walk, pull yourself up to your full height, hips tucked in, chin, chest and abdomen up, shoulders back, but relaxed and away you go, looking as if your ideas were hitched to a star . . . and a tall star at that.

Did anyone ever tell you not to point your toes out when you walk? Well, it is one of the worst things you can do. It will weaken your arches and throw the entire body out of alignment. Toeing out is almost as bad for your body as having the wheels out of line for your car. Point your toes straight ahead, and, to strengthen the arches, practice walking on a straight line, with the weight on the outer borders of your feet.

Walking is one of the most adaptable of all exercises. It is equally good for the fat and the thin. The reducer should speed along at the rate of three and three-quarters miles per hour to burn a couple of calories per pound of bodyweight. The thin person who is out to gain a little weight must hold herself down to an easy, ambling gait which will, nevertheless, afford much needed exercise.

Walk every day—not just when you think of it. Take advantage of this crisp, fall weather and get out into the open just as often as you can. With an appreciation of walking that assures you of daily exercise and a posture that does you credit, there is no reason why you should not cover a good many steps in the right direction—toward a better figure.

Do you know how much you should weigh? You can check your age and height with your present weight by using Ida Jean Kain's "Height-Age-Weight Chart for Women." Ask also for the "Pointers to Slimness." Send a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Miss Kain in care of this paper.

Advice on Beauty Problems Given Free of Charge

By ARLINE GOULD

"I LIKE that face you're wearing . . ." the popular song goes, but there are very few of us who are satisfied with our own.

There are few women who don't feel that their hair could be softer and shinier, or cut more becomingly, that our skin could be more radiant or our make-up more wisely selected.

For just these problems and the countless others which involve a woman's loveliness, a beauty clinic has been established in a Boston store. It's a wondrous institution and will be a boon to hundreds of women.

There is no charge or obligation whatever for the consultation service. You simply take your beauty problems to the clinic and there they are solved by experts.

There's a beauty bar, all shiny and attractive, with a tempting display of lipsticks, rouges and powders of every conceivable hue. You examine your skin in a special mirror which mercilessly reveals flaws and tiny blemishes you may not have known existed.

A skin specialist is there to advise you on the care of your skin and to analyze your particular problems. The specialist is particularly helpful to women with skin difficulties, as she's trained to prescribe for and care such cases.

A specialist in hair is also there to help with scalp problems, thinness, dandruff and the like. You may also have advice on how to wear your hair, whether or not a different cut would be more becoming, and to give you words of wisdom on the question of dyes and tints.

Mothers of young babies will find that here she can receive excellent advice on care of her beauty, a problem which is a serious one after the birth of a child. End of summer difficulties such as parched skin, fading tan and dry, scraggly hair are other reasons why this beauty clinic is such a grand and wondrous thing.

If you would like to know where this beauty clinic is telephone Arline Gould at Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Angina Pectoris

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

ANGINA PECTORIS is a painful disorder of the heart, all too commonly attacking middle-aged or elderly men. Occasionally it occurs in women, but rarely afflicts young persons.

In former times the sufferers from angina pectoris were doomed to their unpleasant fate.

Today, as a result of our better understanding of heart disease, certain measures can be taken which may overcome the ailment, or cause the attacks to be greatly lessened in severity. In fact, it is hoped that the time will soon come when the disease will be numbered among the preventable ones.

PAIN IS SYMPTOM

As a rule, the symptoms follow undue exertion of some kind. It may occur after running, or walking briskly up hill.

The patient complains of pain which appears over the middle or upper part of the chest. This is often described as a feeling of pressure, squeezing, gripping or burning. There is continuous distress. At times the pain may be so high in the chest and at the base of the neck that it gives a sensation of strangling or suffocating. For this reason the condition was originally described as an "angina."

If the victim stands still and avoids any further effort, the discomfort or pain goes away in a minute or two. The sufferer finds that if he presses forward, the discomfort increases, perhaps extending to the neck or jaw, and to one or the other arm. If it affects an arm it is usually the left one, following along the inner side. Sometimes numbness may be observed in the fingers or arm.

Not every case is as mild as this. In the severe form the pain is more acute and subsides slowly. It may be so severe as to produce agonizing discomfort. The victim becomes stiff and there is a frightened expression of the face. The skin is pale and moist. The administration of an opiate may be needed to control the terrible symptoms.

NEED MEDICAL CARE

Let me advise all who have this trouble to avoid strenuous exercise, fatigue and excessive exertion of any kind. Of course, all persons with angina pectoris should be under medical care. The doctor will outline the necessary treatment and prescribe the needed medicine. Exercise is beneficial, but the exact type and amount of exercise can only be determined by study of the individual case.

May I add this word? Too many persons are acutely worried about heart disease. They think they have it, yet hesitate to seek medical advice.

Really this is a great pity. If you really have it, you need advice and, by following it, may live out your exp[illegible]y.

Married Comrades

CHAPTER 109

I DID NOT have to wait a split second for the boys' answer to my question as to whether I should plan a place in the luggage for the cage containing their white mice.

Any thoughtful mother will comprehend the thrill of joyous pride in my heart when Junior exclaimed resolutely:

"Plan a place for the mice? I should say not! If we're going to stand guard up there in the mountains over—" he caught his father's eye and stopped before he had uttered a name, then went on manfully: "Anyway, if we're going to stand guard, we won't have any time to monkey with any pets whatever.

"I am very glad you decided that way," I said, "although no one would have blamed you if you had taken the cage of white mice with you. But your decision shows that you have a grown-up view of duty and are ready to do your part up there."

WANT TO SEE PETS

They wriggled uneasily, as youngsters do under praise, especially that which is a bit above the heads, and I released them with an approving pat upon each shoulder. But, making no move to go, they looked from Dicky to me with such unconscious appeal that I was glad when Dicky said hesitantly:

"You want something, kids. I know it by the cut of your jibs. Out with it."

They giggled in embarrassment, looking at each other. Then Junior squared his shoulders resolutely and looked steadily at his father.

"You know animals have to go to sleep terrible early," he began.

"Yes, we have observed that law of nature," Dicky returned gravely.

"And—and—if we're not taking the livestock, we'd kinda like to say goodby to 'em before we go."

"You see," Roderick struck in with a cheerfulness in ludicrous contrast to his lugubrious prophecy, "probably something will happen to some of 'em before we get back."

"Don't say that!" I exclaimed a bit sharply, for I had seen Junior wince at this ghoulish prediction. "I am sure Jim will take the very best possible care of them. But let us get this straight. You want to go now and say goodby to your pets. Is that it?"

"That's it," he answered. "We thought maybe you'd let us come back and jig our toys back to the playroom after we get through saying goodby to the animals, instead of doing it now."

"That's for your father to decide," I said with a sly smile at Dicky.

"Kin we?" asked Junior.

Dicky nodded, and I said meticulously, "Yes, you may go now."

They scampered off at once, and Dicky looked at me teasingly.

MADGE AN OPTIMIST

"That's nothing," he said. "They'll probably make bally nuisances of themselves, and you'll be sorry I spoke."

But he was speaking absently, as if he were not thinking of what he was saying, and a sudden flaming of his eyes prepared me for the impetuous embrace in which he caught me upon his last word.

"I've told you not to look at me like that," he said as he kissed me with rough tenderness. And when he departed immediately afterward, in order, as he said, to keep the boys from "barging in" upon me, I stood still for a long minute, savoring that most blissful of all knowledge to a wife: that the beautiful steady married comradeship which is wedlock's most desirable goal, need not be altogether devoid of the wild, impetuous, romantic moments of young love.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Bride-to-Be Asks Recipe For Successful, Happy Married Life

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A girl who is going to be married in six weeks wonders how it is possible for women to observe silver weddings, with never a divorce in the family.

She asks for a general recipe for avoiding Reno.

The best formula, it seems to me—not only with marriage but with everything in life, job, home (city or country), amusements—is to take the goods the gods provide and make the best of them.

The trouble with most of our "Calamity Janes" and Johns is that they always want to try something other than what they have.

If they live in the city, how happy they would be if only they lived on a farm—even a house in the suburbs would meet their yearning. If they live on a farm, oh, they cry, for the conveniences of a city flat.

The shortcomings of their own families are so much harder to bear than the shortcomings of any other person's family that they keep house and have to do the marketing, instead of getting a job of wholesome fun out of the dickering they sigh for hotel or boarding house life.

ALWAYS DISCONTENTED

If they board, positive happiness would await them in the kitchenette, with shining pots and their own skill in turning out a meal.

This Elysium would probably last for a week or so before they'd be back in the drugstores, eating something strange at the soda counter.

Other women's husbands do not repeat their stories and jokes as often as their husbands do. They're probably more considerate, too, than other women's husbands, and may have a natural wave in their hair, or wear more becoming neckties.

Don't laugh at these trifles. Mountains may begin with molehills, and a positive aversion leading to Reno, may start with the way someone eats his or her soup, or handles a knife and fork.

To play safe in marriage, remove your blinders before you buy your trousseau, and observe. If you dislike the way a young man eats his soup, or how his ears stick out, or his square-toed shoes, his neckties, or the way he manicures his finger-nails in public, please don't marry that particular man.

But if you do marry him, don't eternally compare him to some other woman's husband, who may not do those things.

The trouble with all of us is we're looking for the haven beyond the far horizon. The simple expedient of making the best of what has been given us is lost in the dream of finding a pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow.

Without doubt, the best brand of yeast to leaven one's daily bread is a sense of humor—not a false sense of humor, which is tickled by seeing someone fall and hurt himself, or that satistic brand which rejoices in something cruel.

But just a good, honest way of seeing the fun in things. If you only keep your eyes open, life provides one long, unending comic strip, full of Jiggses and Maggies.

CHILDREN BRING JOY

There is real happiness in watching the development of young children. A baby smiling at you from his carriage is enough to dispel ill humor for a day. A two-year-old trudging along in a sun-suit, owning the world, is a sight to gladden any heart.

Children's toys scattered on a sidewalk, as they make-believe playing house, is delightful and amusing.

And there's a whole world of fun in cats, dogs and other animals. There's genuine delight in making things grow—petunias in a window-box, if you can't have a garden.

And there's lots of fun in turning out an appetizing dish, or making a perfect cup of tea or coffee, or singing a new book. And without being a Pollyanna, the world is really full of nice things, if we don't close our eyes and turn away from them.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

After the honeymoon, I discovered I had drawn a grouch. I know I'm a good housekeeper, and no dust rewarded the prowling had tried in every corner, but my husband raised Cain over the cooking. I boiled the eggs, timing them by an hour-glass, but they were never right. The coffee was too weak or too strong. The biscuits were not done well, or too well done.

At first this worried me, but after a while, I saw it was just Mike's way. The funny thing is I have been a teacher of domestic science, and know I am a good cook.

So when Mike came home from his office the other day, I had on my hat and announced we were going out to dinner, and there would be no more meals prepared at home. He blustered, but I "quit" answer, and as he made no move to go out, I went out and got something to eat.

When I returned he was cooking some sort of a mess for himself and had every dish in the kitchen dirty. I asked him if he enjoyed his dinner and made no move to clean up after him. It was the same at breakfast next morning and the next night at dinner.

Finally, all the dishes, pots and pans were dirty in the sink, and I asked him what he was going to do about it.

It seemed he told his troubles to his mother, and she told me secretly. I was doing the right thing—that he threw fits about the cooking at home. So I bought a nice bungalow apron and went home and visited my mother for a week. Mike has reformed.

BETTY S. T.

MY DEAR BETTY:

If I were to congratulate this lady on handling a most trying domestic situation, I'm afraid I would have all the complaining husbands down on me like a thousand bricks.

However, I'm giving this letter in full, as a sort of domestic missionary tract.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Fun With Numerology

ARE YOU lucky in some places, unlucky in others?

In one house your jelly always "jelled." Johnny had high grades in school. In another house the goldfish died, Johnny broke his collar-bone.

Numerology has an explanation for all this. You figure your name and address out by a system which gives each letter of the alphabet a number. In our sketch above, the name given is "Frances Booth" adds up to 54. To reduce 54 to a one-digit figure add 5 and 4 and you have "9" as the clue to Frances' inner nature. "James Booth" and "21 Oak Street" adds up to 36, and 3 plus 6 is "9."

To bring luck, name and address should total the same. To add number or both to an even. The Booths are going to be ever so lucky in their new "9" home! The ideal spot for them!

There's a way to read the riddle of character by numerology, too. The vowels of your name show whether you're a "6," a "2" or a "3," and each is a distinct type.

If you're a "6," old ties hold you in the clutch of sentiment, petty habit. Financial difficulties will never handicap you long for you combine conscientiousness with intelligence—an excellent team for business success.

Spring something new on your friends! Get our 40-page booklet, "Secrets of Numerology." The subject is fascinatingly treated. A sure-fire party success.

Send 15c for our booklet "Secrets of Numerology," to Boston Evening American Home Institute, 109 West 39th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Dinner Frock Charms

THOSE WHO SING of a "table for two" must have in their mind's eye a girl who looks like this . . . in a daring, lithe gown that's slight as a whisper in the dark.

Above the taper of its black crepe skirt is the rose-flame top, with a flickering design of white sequins. A two-tone sash swathes the high waist.

For dinner at home. For dinner in some intimate spot, with the softest swing music the town affords, you might wear with it an infinitesimal black velvet turban that has a velvet ribbon looped across the top.

A Guided Opening Lead

The amount of information that an expert player can gleam from one single bid is little short of amazing.

Nor am I referring merely to such revelatory calls as an opening two bid.

West's one spade response was of course shaded, so far as the bidability of the suit was concerned, but was probably the best big available.

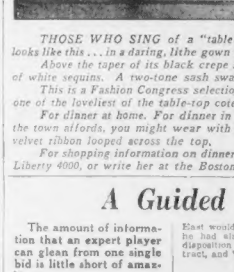
The fact that it was shaded later formed the crucial point of the hand.

East's jump over two hearts to three spades was a slight stretch—two spades would have been strong enough as a free raise. West's double of four clubs was a combination bid.

West knew that if he passed, East would bid four spades since he had already shown a strong disposition to reach that contract, and West was by no means anxious to play for four spades with a suit as weak as his. He correctly figured that if four spades could be made, the vulnerable opponents could be set.

Every bit of this message was intelligible to East when it came to his selecting the opening lead. As a matter of fact, East did think that the double strongly indicated a decided shortness of hearts in his partner's hand, and for that reason he opened the Ace, hoping to find the King in the dummy and to have West ruff it away on a continuation.

But the fact that this did not materialize was unimportant. The crucial point was that East did not open a spade. Had he done so, the contract would have become a laydown, since nothing could have prevented declarer from making two spade tricks on the opening lead, ruffing two more and thus establishing the fifth spade as a long card.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	4 ♣
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

But as it was, East promptly shifted to his singleton trump, after leading the heart Ace. West won and returned a trump, and after that, instead of losing no spade tricks, declarer had to lose two for a two-trick defeat.

New BOOKS On HOMEMAKING

By MARTHA LEE

SEVERAL new books on Homemaking have recently arrived at our desk — books that will be of interest to housewives of all ages and all places.

The new edition of "Fanny Farmer," or the famous Boston Cooking School Cook Book is just off the press and has been greatly revised to lay emphasis on modern trends in menu planning. The work has been done by Miss Farmer's niece, Mrs. Dexter Perkins, so that although there are changes, the original Fanny has been the guiding spirit.

The hors d'oeuvre and menu suggestions have been greatly enlarged and in each case the number of recipes swells new book. And without being a Pollyanna, the world is really full of nice things, if we don't close our eyes and turn away from them.

"Good Cooking Made Easy and Economical," the book published by Heseltine and Dow three years ago, is revised for numerous reasons which the authors state. When first published the book was written primarily for the beginner in the home—the cook so overlooked by everyone. In the revised form the book is made to appeal to the older cook who wants to check her methods with the newer, simpler practices now in vogue.

New foods are included and new chapters on home canned foods, preserves, jellies and pickles, an important addition. Also more sectional recipes and famous dishes will intrigue the housewife to try new treats for the family. All of the revisions have been requested by users of the book, a fact in itself of importance to all users.

A perfect find is this new book by Florence LaGanke Harris, "Everywoman's Complete Guide to Homemaking." Mrs. Harris is director of Women's Activities, Building Arts Exhibit, Inc., in Cleveland and has talked to thousands of women on the many perplexing problems that arise in everyday housekeeping — problems for which they must grope for answers, a time-consuming and irritating neces-ity. If she spills the ink, how can she remove it? Where can she get a competent part-time maid? How much material will be required for a table cover, and where does one place the monogram on linen? What is the correct length for glass curtains, and are Venetian blinds here to stay? Where can she find out about the new consumer education movement, and how can she take the scorch out of a shirt? Should she buy table knives with long blades and short handles? If a recipe calls for kilograms, what is the equivalent in ounces?

Here are the answers to these and a thousand other questions in this new book. It covers everything and the kitchen sink. It is a veritable mine of information, all of it the most authentic available, and will be indispensable to any housekeeper's tranquility.

A companion book for this one is "The Householder's Complete Handbook," by Hawthorne Daniel, which would appeal to the man of the family, for it tells the easy right way of handling many mechanical problems. It gives hundreds of simple instructions for the care, adjustment and even the renewal of nearly every part of a house from cellar to attic.

"GIVE ME YOUR HEART"

A NEW SERIAL

By Lewis Allen Browne

A COSMOPOLITAN PRODUCTION RELEASED BY WARNER BROTHERS

CHAPTER 23

Florence smiled and thanked him. Tubbs called the taxi behind. To his surprise when he walked into the apartment foyer, the woman was ahead of him.

Florence recognized him as he stepped into the elevator and wondered if he had heard her give the taxi man the address and followed her.

Almost in unison they said to the elevator man, "Sixteen."

Tubbs smiled but Florence eyed him with growing suspicion. When, however, she walked down to the door, 16-C, and Tubbs followed, holding a card in his hand, she realized that it was merely coincidence.

"Hello, Johnson," Florence said when the butler opened the door, "Mrs. Baker expects me."

"Yes, Miss?" he replied and held the door open.

"And Mister Baker expects me," Tubbs said, showing him the card.

"Yes indeed, sir."

Johnson departed, leaving Tubbs and Florence in the foyer. Tubbs smiled at her. "We seem destined to meet," he said as both sat down.

"Frequently," Florence agreed. "And, who are we to argue against fate?"

There was something about Tubbs, his smile, his eyes, that Florence Cudahy, a keen judge of men, liked instantly.

"Well, who are we? A pertinant question. As for me, I am Florence Cudahy," she told him.

"My name is Barrow."

"I know you—a G-man, following people about."

Both laughed at this.

"I do that as an avocation. As a vocation, I write, as little as possible. Actually, by profession, it seems, I am an humble taxpayer."

Florence laughed at this. She liked the man better and better.

"Aren't we all?" she cried.

"Only I never seem to pay the correct amount. That's why I am here, to make use of Mr. Baker's free legal mind."

"You are one of the great army that must be helped with income tax figures?"

"Afraid so. What are you?" He glanced at the black bag at her feet.

"I hate to tell you."

"Oh, surely not!"

"Is that the kind of a mind you have?"

"Definitely," Tubbs assured her with one of his irresistible grins.

"I am only a doctor."

Tubbs looked at her and saw that she meant it. He extended his wrist. "How's my pulse?" he asked.

"Not interested, and don't start telling your symptoms."

"I have no symptoms, but my elbow is getting lame, all of my New York acquaintances put in so much time crooking elbows."

When Johnson, at the bedroom door, handed Jim Tubbs' card Jim slipped it in his pocket and said, "I will be right down."

Linda said, "Tell Miss Cudahy I will be right down, Johnson." To Jim she said, "Whoever is it, on a Sunday, my dear?"

"An English chap, about his income tax. I wouldn't have seen him today, but Woolf asked me to do so as a favor. It won't take too long."

After Johnson had come to the foyer and said, "Mrs. Baker will be right down, miss," Tubbs asked, "What is wrong with her, doctor?"

"Who?"

"With Lin—this Mrs. Baker."

"There is nothing wrong with her, she is one swell person."

"I mean, are you here, professionally? Isn't she well?"

"Against medical ethics, Mr. Barrow, to discuss a patient's condition with anyone, especially a perfect stranger."

"Intimately"

"But, while I am a stranger, I'm not perfect. You might give me some hint—"

"You are too smart, altogether."

Florence smiled at him, as Jim entered and greeted them.

"Bill will be right down, Florence," he said, and to Tubbs, "sorry to have kept you waiting, sir."

"Quite all right, I assure you, Mr. Baker. We have been having a delightful time," Tubbs replied.

"You two know each other?" Jim evinced surprise.

"We do now, Jim," Florence said.

"Indeed, yes, intimately," Tubbs added.

Florence crossed to the stairway and called up, asking Linda if she should come up. Tubbs was thrilled to recognize Linda's voice as she called back that she would be right down.

"If you will come into the library," Jim said, "we will get down to business."

Tubbs opened his cigarette case and offered one to Jim, who refused.

"It was awfully nice of you to see me today, Mr. Baker," Tubbs told him. He took a cigarette and deliberately left his case on a little stand in the living room as he passed through. Florence had already gone into the living room to await Linda, but she did not notice Tubbs leaving the case.

In the library Jim lighted a cigar and began to study the papers Tubbs had brought.

"I will run over this first, Mr. Barrow, so that I may talk intelligently about it," Jim explained.

"Quite so."

Tubbs tried to see out of the library but was unable to do so. Faintly he heard voices, as Linda came down and greeted Florence, but he couldn't distinguish them or what was said. The library was down off a small hall.

Florence studied Linda, professionally.

"Terrific headache this morning, Jim insisted I send for you, my dear," Linda explained.

"Let me see——" she began to feel the cords of Linda's neck. Heather tightened up, there."

"I'll say. I can't sleep."

"Nerves——but there shouldn't be, Bill. What is it?"

"It's driving me crazy."

"But what is it, Bill? There is always a reason."

"I don't know. I've tried hot milk—lots of things. Jim won't let me take tablets."

"Good for Jim. You must get more exercise—twice around the reservoir, every morning."

"What's Up?"

"Oh dear—I would have to get a dog to walk with."

"A husband is better, my dear. And I will send someone around every night to rub you—a strong, skillful Swedish woman who helps me. That ought to fix you up."

"That's sweet of you, Florence, but it really isn't as simple as all that."

"Bill—can't you tell me what it is? Can't you shed any light? I am only trying to help."

"I'm worried about Jim."

"What's up?"

"I haven't been very nice to him, lately."

"That's up to you, and no one else, Bill."

"It's ghastly to know you are are being rotten to someone you love. Every morning I am positively foul to him, simply because he is always so cheerful and healthy, and I am just one jump ahead of insanity. What shall I do, Florence? I feel as though I were deep in quicksand, already!"

"Well, this rather takes it out of my province until after you have consulted a psychoanalyst. He will dig it out for you."

"No, no!" Linda's eyes were filled with terror. "That's just it—I won't have him digging it out—going over my past!"

"Now listen, my dear—for the moment I am not Florence Cudahy, your close friend, I am Doctor Cudahy and I am telling you what to do—not merely asking you to do something."

"But a psychoanalyst—Oh, Florence, I couldn't," Linda whimpered.

"If there is nothing to dig up, w-y worry? If there is, the psychoanalyst is quite as trustworthy as a priest, whatever he learns from you he keeps secret, and he will help you."

"He will ask questions and questions—and—and—I hate the idea having him poke his fingers in my eyes—it will hurt."

"A long time ago I told you the way out—to put everything behind you, forget the past, live for the present."

"But I cannot"

"Sit down here beside me and talk, Bill—about pleasant things, about the happy days of your girlhood in England and with your father in Italy."

"You are trying to draw me out!"

"I am trying to help you—often a person has to be cut open in order to be helped, but a cure follows."

"Oh, yes, sewn up again, but, Florence, since that is done, the scar always shows."

"Not unless you are a nudist, darling."

Linda was forced to laugh at this. Tactfully, gently, the calm Florence Cudahy began to draw her into a pleasant conversation.

In the library Tubbs was trying to follow all that Jim was telling him about the income tax schedule, but his mind was on Linda and he scarcely understood a word.

"Now, Mr. Barrow," Jim said, cheerfully, "we simply add schedules A, B, C, D and E. Then we subtract schedule F."

"A, B—er—What's that?" Tubbs asked.

"Schedule F contains the deductions under items 1, 13, 14, 17 and 18. Also the deductions under schedules A and B."

"M-m-m?"

Poor Tubbs was all at sea. "I lost you away back at the second letter of the alphabet, Mr. Baker. Why couldn't your Supreme Court have abolished all letters, when they were at it did with NRA and AAA and the others?"

"That's a hot one!" Jim laughed heartily. "Who said you English had a slow sense of humor?"

"Well, naturally, I am depending on you. If I could concoct plots for my poor novels as complicated as your income tax, what wonderful mystery and problem stories I could turn out!"

RABBI PORRATH IN ATTACK ON COMMUNISM

Salem, Sept. 26—Rabbi Samuel J. Porrath, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and at present the guest of the Jewish Community of Salem, speaking at the Yom Kippur services at Congregation Sons of Israel, issued a scathing attack on Communism and its tendencies.

"Judaism and Communism are two extremes opposing each other," he said.

"A Jew cannot possibly be a Communist.

"Communism is not a political party, seeking to rule the world as such—it is rather a poisonous ill-bred trend of thought that thrives on destructive deeds rather than constructive accomplishments.

"Its foundation is erected upon the ruin of governments and the annihilation of religion.

"What Judaism calls noble and considers ideal in life, is termed trash and demoralizing in the Communistic lingo.

"What is undesirable and deceived in Jewish opinion, is good and fine for communism."

"Loyalty to one's country without reservation or stipulation is Israel's basic principle in life. This is the very injunction that Jewish teachers in every age have repeatedly placed upon our people—to seek the peace and tranquility of the country wherein we live and the government that rules it."

"Scape-Goat"

"The accusation that Jews are Communists is absurd and unfounded. For lack of a scapegoat, Israel was picked and branded as such, the Jew being the one who stands the least defended—and the least powerful to combat the arrogant venomous utterances of his evil wishers."

"Arrayed against the facts the accusation of Communists vanish and disappear—and the prime motive becomes apparent, that of using it merely as a screen to hide the malicious inventions of those fostering the disruption of peace, the overthrow of government's and the the alienation of God's ideals from mankind.

"Two thousand years of continued wandering, untold suffering and unbearable pain, countless disappointments and innumerable sacrifices because of the Jew's loyal cleaving to his faith and traditions speak for Israel, defending him against the lies of his enemies who credit Communism to his fold."

Calls for Battle

"No Jew should permit agitation of Communism in his business or every day life. Under the guise of being friendly to labor, the tenets of hatred and religious suppression should not be preached.

"Communism must be eradicated from American life, since it is basically the diametric opposite of American idealism.

"Jews are Americans in America. They must also assume the citizen's job of policeman to defend and protect Americanism and to destroy wherever it exists —Communism."

Rabbi Porrath is well-known as a forceful orator and capable journalist. He has won wide reputation for his brilliant utterances and analytical papers. He a member of the executive boards of several important organizations and is active in communal and civic affairs.

B.C. Students Urged to Fight Reds

Asserting the time is fast coming when the countries of the world must choose between Catholic or atheistic culture, Christianity or Communism, the Rev. Louis J. Gallagher, S. J., president of Boston College, exhorted the juniors and seniors of the college to defend their Catholic philosophy, completely opposed to Communism if they wish to make a success of life.

"Why is it," asked Fr. Gallagher, "that Spain is torn by the worst revolution the world has ever seen, that the reports of this conflict are garbled in the American press, that the reports seem to favor the Reds, or the bolsheviks?

"Have we come to an open conflict between the forces of Catholicism and Christianity against the forces of atheism and Communism? And where does the American press stand in this fight?

"My dear young men, the better hold you get on your Catholic philosophy, the better success you will make of your college career and the more successful will be your future life."

The Rev. Joseph R. N. Maxwell, S. J., dean of the college, greeted the upper classmen in their first formal meeting and introduced to the students the Rev. P. J. Nolan, S. J., and the Rev. president.

They Set Candles Gleaming For Yom Kippur

MRS. MOLLY YANES MRS. RACHEL LEVENSON

This is the most sacred day on the Jewish calendar, Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. Here we see Mrs. Molly Yanes, 73, and Mrs. Rachel Levenson, 76, lighting candles during Kol Nindre services at the Hebrew Ladies Home for the Aged, Queen street, Dorchester. Jews everywhere are observing the holy advent.

YOM KIPPUR TO END TONIGHT

Bringing to a close the 10 days of penitence which began with the New ear, Jews throughout the city thronged temples and synagogues today to observe Yom Kippur, the most solemn day in the Jewish calendar.

Throughout the day, according to tradition, Jews must abstain from food, drink, work and all worldly pleasures, spending hours in prayer and supplication.

Yom Kippur is the day when, according to biblical tradition, a man asks forgiveness for his sins by prayer.

At sundown today the sound of the trumpet or "shofar" is the signal to eat, drink, work and be merry again.

Throughout Greater Boston temples were packed to overflowing.

Contest to Close Oct. 12. Hurry!

With the $1000 Hearst national Landon Campaign Song Contest nearing its finale (October 12), hundreds of entries deluged the editor today from all over New England.

Frankly we're sorry we can't give you all an award for your efforts We have to draw the line very fine in many instances to choose the winner, but after all everyone can't win.

Today's winner of the $10 daily award is Meg Gammons Eddy, of 163-A South Main street, Attleboro. Her lyrics to "Oh! Suzanna" were the tops!

Her entry will be entered in the national contest at which nationally famous composers and musicians act as judges in selecting the final winner of the $1000 grand prize and a second of $500. There will be 25 awards of $20 each, too.

WITH LANDON ON HIS ELEPHANT, THIS NATION CAN'T BE BEAT!

CHASE THAT DONKEY!

The NEW DEAL was a RAW DEAL, we're wise now, through and through,
And ne'er again shall we be fooled, "dear" F. D. R., by you,
So, while we mount our elephants and gaily ride along,

HIP, HOORAY! We'll shout the Jubilee of big and better times
Instead of being "Unemployed," we'll soon be jingling dimes.
Our purses have been mighty slim since we've been on Relief,
And the Boondoggling we've had to do is way beyond belief!

We're sick and tired of "candied dates"—we want a CANDIDATE,
With accent on the "CANDID"—who will steer our ship of state,
NOT steal its wheel and rudders, as F. D. R. tried to do—
So join in with the chorus, it's the least that you can do.

(Refrain)

Chase that Donkey, chase him up the street,
The Donkey is a stubborn beast, and none too bright, it's true,
But the Elephant remembers, and will be a friend to you.
He brings a trunk that's full of help, the help that's almost here.
So sing this song with all your hearts, and pack it full of cheer.

Terry and Cronin, Same System but Opposite Results

IN EXAMINING THE MEANS BY WHICH Destiny beckoned the Giants to a pennant, one is impressed that Will Terry won with the same executive methods which ruined Joe Cronin's Red Sox. Terry, like Cronin, regards ball players as plain people, giving them credit for professional intelligence and inviting them to take responsibility for their decisions, both on and off the field.

Austen Lake

The system, which Terry terms "a kind of community co-operation" in his forthcoming magazine article entitled, "How to Win a Pennant," spelled Cronin's collapse, and I am at a loss to say why it succeeded at the Polo Grounds and failed so dismally at Fenway Park.

Like Cronin, Terry declined the job of chaperone to a set of male adults and stayed just a ball player among other ball players. He gave his men permission to attend the opera in the evening if they wished, or even to tarry over a thimble and crust in some cocktail lounge before going home to bed.

He had his share of rough and rowdy athletes, too, including Dick Coffman, Roy Spencer and little Dickie Bartell, who were fond of wandering away after dark in quest of some boisterous fun in the hell-raising sections of the city.

Coffman Too Tough for Hornsby

COFFMAN IS A FREE AND RESTLESS spirit whom Rogers Hornsby tried to soften with his fists during Pullman jumps with the St. Louis Browns. He took pleasure in busting Hornsby's clubhouse laws, so Rogers would bang his head against the window sills and sleeper stanchions, keeping Dick in a kind of delirious daze, which he likened to the woozy effects of seven-year-old rye. It was even said that Dick used to ask Rogers, please, to bat his skull some more against the Pullman furniture for the sake of the fazzy sensations, which he found fully as satisfying and less expensive than buying high voltage bottle goods and, afterwards produced no sick stomachs or acid corrosions in the mouth.

Hornsby never discriminated between one ball player and another and held that the only way to keep them all orderly was to make them all repentant before committing any sins. But he finally kicked Coffman upstairs to the Giants because, he said, he couldn't keep pace with Dick's voracious appetite for punishment and the picturesque inebriate was hogging more than his share of abuse and depriving other deserving Browns of their just sluggings.

Reformed Them with Kindness

SPENCER IS A QUAINT CHARACTER who used to enjoy convenient lapses of memory while with the old Pittsburgh Pirates, sometimes recovering consciousness, broke and marooned, in some haystack town in the Middle West with no notion of how he got there and only an alcoholic breath and dishpan noises in his head to suggest the cause.

He returned to Pittsburgh after one such absence, wearing a pair of purpled eyes, a gouged lip and a skinned knuckle, claiming that all went blank while stumming with some strangers and waking up in a Chillicothe, O., sanitarium. He was a belligerent lad, too, who went around asking to be fought with and sometimes, in sheer boredom, choosing up sides with any bystander.

Bartell is merely a frisky midget, whose worst offense was to sign up with the Phillies, where he ran foul of the management for some forgotten mischief. Probably he stayed up late or wouldn't eat his spinach. So Terry took him to New York, putting it up to him to keep reasonably fit. He gave the worst of his men the same freedom as the best, the only catch being, that if, in consequence of dissipation, they couldn't play ball for him, they would be fired.

Terry Refused to Play House Dick

TERRY TOLD ME THAT HE HAS HAD no mutinies among his players and, though he never kept any keyhole, switchboard and detective data on his players, had no reason to think that they abused his liberality. They had been docile and industrious, he said, from the moment that he took them over from John McGraw in 1933, and immediately suspended old John's reform school system.

He had rarely fined a player, he said, and never dragged any of his men under the grandstand to dust them with his knuckles. And he said that he treated rare cases of surliness and clubhouse gripes by summoning the patients into his office and talking papa language, which was both forceful and plain.

Mr. McGraw, he said, in his years as the Giants' master mind had attended to running every detail of play in the ball game from his murky cave and had offended the pride of the athletes, "of which" Bill said, "I was one." It tended, he thought, to rebuke dashing initiative to be publicly beholden in the boss for instruction in the tiniest detail of their work.

An Unmixable Formula

IF TOLERANCE WORKED SO CONSPICUOUSLY for Terry, why didn't it work a similar miracle for Joe Cronin, who had more skilled talent in the Red Sox dugout than Bill had on his Giants. Joe had no drunkards on his team. Nobody on the Red Sox ever gave hotel men the horrors on the road, or kicked up any ructions at home. They were paid fancier salaries than any other team in the league. Yet, where Terry won, the Red Sox lugged down in the slough, the most despondent failure on modern record.

The answer is perhaps that Cronin with the Giants might have won just as Terry won. And that Terry with the Red Sox might have failed just as Joe failed. The Red Sox fault probably traces to the queer chemistry of blending so many cattle blood, bones and flesh in a single pot, producing an unreliable brew. The players, individually united, collectively came down with what psychiatrists call a "sacrosanct complex," which means "more of one's own image," and Joe was not sufficiently executive to make his decisions stick. Also one is inclined to suspect that a set of reformed drunks is prone to be destined on a ball club that a scattering of egotists and emotional eccentrics like Wes Ferrell, Lefty Grove and Big Werber, who are incapable of isolating their faults and therefore never able to correct them.

Holy Cross Flying Fullback Goes Out to Meet Bates Bobcats

BILL OSMANSKI, great Holy Cross fullback, may not start today's game against the Bobcats. He will be held in reserve and only used for a short while. He is not in the best of shape and Coach Eddie Anderson refuses to take any chances on his ace for he has Temple, Colgate, Harvard, Manhattan and Boston College ahead. If Bates surprises, however, Bill will be rushed right into the fray. (Picture from International News Photo via Boston Herald)

VETERAN Team for PURPLE

UNDECIDED ON STARTERS

By WALTER KILEY

Worcester, Sept. 26—Holy Cross is a win-as-it-pleases favorite to lift its football opener on the freshly trimmed turf of Fitton Field this afternoon.

Dave Morey's Bates team, doughty fighters and formidable enough in their own small college field, but overmatched against the Purple, are being served up as a burnt offering sacrifice to propitiate the Crusaders' desires for a first gun "set-up."

A year ago Holy Cross overwhelmed the Maine Bobcats, 79-0. Dr. Eddie Anderson, Purple head coach, may be expected to temper a certain victory with mercy today.

In all probability he will pull his punches once the verdict is assured, and rush into the affair all the members of the rear guard.

Victory Sure

Whatever the tabulations, it is a foregone conclusion that the Purple will continue the undefeated streak established back in the 1934 season.

Dr. Anderson was still undecided on his starting lineup this morning.

It is experimental day, a fine opportunity to test his ambitious newcomers and understudies of past years under actual fire.

By nightfall the Purple coach will have a better line on how this group stands up against the veteran combination of Rex Kidd of Melrose, quarterback; Joe Dougherty, Joe Yablonsky and Freddie Hanifan.

There are countless other fine Crusader backs in addition, all ready to prove their right to first team ratings.

Coach Worries

Dr. Anderson professes to be more than a bit worried over his line and its replacements, in particular.

From this corner many of his frontier concerns are highly imaginative.

Captain Bob Curley, Bill Shields, John O'Donnell and Bill Rittershaus can do a very creditable job at the wings. Dave Gavin and Hip Moncewicz were among the finest 1935 tackles. Ecio Luciano was a standout guard a year ago and is improved. John Carr is coming fast at the other guard. Bob Mautner, with his 207 pounds of hardened muscle, looms as one of the centers of the new campaign, with fine reserves in Jim Bowman and Billy Ryan.

And behind this group are other youngsters, big and strong and champing at the bit in their eagerness to replace five veterans.

Morey's line will be considerably outweighed. But its backfield boasts a couple of heavy fellows in Marcus and Frost who should do justice to Bates' offensive tactics.

Holy Cross will need today's warm-up. In the immediate future lurk a long array of potent elevens, Providence, Dartmouth, Manhattan, Carnegie Tech, Temple, Colgate, Brown, St. Anselm's and Boston College, as formidable a line-up as faces any Eastern collegians this 1936 season.

PLUCKY BABY WILSON BEST BET

ACTION Named in FIFTH

JACK SNIPE IN OPENER

By DAVE WILSON

Selections for Fast Track

BEST—PLUCKY BABY, 7TH

Narragansett Park, Sept. 26— Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Action, was a sensation of New York racing and winner of 10 out of 11 starts this year.

The racer should celebrate his first New England appearance under racing silks by scoring over smart opposition in the $5000 added Rochambeau Handicap, mile and three-sixteenths feature on a gala getaway card here today.

Plucky Baby, as she is placed in the mile and one-sixteenth of the seventh number, shapes up as the outstanding wagering hazard of the day.

FIRST—Jack Snipe Scotch Gold, Fake.

JACK SNIPE, nosed out by Infinita, needs only to duplicate that most creditable endeavor to lead this group of $2000 top and bottom pasters. SCOTCH GOLD, winner of two straights, is strictly the horse to fear. FAKE, fresh as a daisy, should prove difficult to down for the show award.

SECOND—Just Remember, Lee Gold, Scotch Soldier.

JUST REMEMBER, third to Bangin and Pepsi, at Saratoga, is a victim of a poorly judged ride in that race. With more patient handling, the Takeru colt-bearer may be along in time to snare top honors. LEE GOLD, third to High Manager at Aqueduct, steps 10 pounds off that recent test. SCOTCH SOLDIER figures close on this one.

THIRD—Enfin, Evening Tide, Papene

ENFIN, third to Jewell Dorsett and Toothicake, who is good in his own antimore. Off that performance I find it impossible to pass up the Trotter entrant against this less capable opposition. EVENING TIDE'S last race don't go with this reserve. Figures close on a previous winning effort. PAPENE, second to Rudie, will be dangerous if he runs back to that recent race.

FOURTH—Wha Hae, Happy Knot, Lady Higloss

WHA HAE, although has no difficulty winning this event if sent back after today's effort. He is no speed ball handler and can't be no mistakes and lead her to the wire. LADY HIGLOSS, soprano bravely weathered the 117 pounds. but is such a consistent performer that she must always be respected.

FIFTH—Achelia, Aloma, Espoxa

ACTION defeated Rosemont in the Aqueduct handicap Sept. 5, at Aqueduct rather easily. The latter came to New England to conquer the stars in the Narragansett Special. Right off this line Action appears admirable in the mile and a sixteenths in the Rochambeau handicap. ACCOLADE is very partial to the track and is fully capable of repeating. ESPOSA can beat any mares horse when in a running mood. She has demonstrated this time and again. Under 104 pounds she figures up a serious threat. BUSHAWAY figures formidable.

SIXTH—Ace of Spades, Hadtobe, First Bid

ACE OF SPADES, a natural route performer, has a distance made to order for him here in this two-mile test. Nicely weighted under 104 pounds he needs only steady handling to be the toughest sort of a horse to beat. HADTOBE holds a touch of class and right off presents excellent endeavors, figures next best. FIRST BID promises to be a worth while rival for the top two.

SEVENTH—Plucky Baby, Ballos, Kindacorn

PLUCKY BABY has little to fear from platers entered to go here. Her most worthy opponent seems to be BALIOS, which has been consistently figure at this distance. KINDACORN, on the improve.

EIGHTH—Bye Bye Mary, Gay Crest, Beaver Lake

BYE BYE MARY appears to hold a slight edge over the large and well balanced field in this mile and a sixteenth test. GAY CREST holds plenty of foot and demonstrated she is fully capable of negotiating the distance by her last impressive score. BEAVER LAKE is best best.

NINTH—Starwick, Gleaming, Sis Royal

STARWICK which met with interference in her last start here is the choice in the substitute number. She probably will be followed by GLEAMING and SIS ROYAL for her rivals if it is necessary to run this race.

TAP'S TIPS

TERRY Insists He's THROUGH

New York, Sept. 26 (AP)—Bill Terry is through as a player after this season. And what's more, he's no sure he'll make it stick this time, that $100 will get you $500 of his cash if he changes his mind.

Terry, who's been riding all season with a bad knee, has been singing the swan song to one of the greatest first-basing careers of all time for more than a year, but each time he reversed himself. However, when a man is willing to lay five to one on anything, he must be talking for the records.

"I'm willing to give you those odds that I won't be on the Giants' reserve player list next season," Terry told baseball writers in his latest retirement announcement.

If he is finally serious about it, he will be winding up a 14-year big league career, all in the uniform of the Giants. He broke in under John McGraw, and was the "old man's" handpicked candidate to succeed him as Giant manager in 1932.

Brewers Win

Milwaukee, Sept. 26—First game of the Little World Series here saw the Milwaukee Brewers earn a 7 to 5 victory over the Buffalo Bisons.

Collyer's Comment

(Copyright, 1936, by Collyers News Bureau)

Chicago, Sept. 26—Justa romp. I mean for the Belair stud's GRANVILLE, the best three-year-old of the season, in that Lawrence Realization, which is on the Belmont docket for this aft.

This is a mile and five furlongs and I frankly can't see how those others are going to get within gunshot of him. In the second feature, the Matron stakes for two-year-olds, I am stringing along with the good JULIET W.—yah, to beat APOGEE.

Latter has not raced recently and that may make a difference. As for the steeplechase, the high-weighted BUSHRANGER gets the call.

At Havre De Grace, a $10,000 stake tops the Saturday program. It is the Potomac handicap and the swell filly, HIGH FLEET, is among the eligibles. She never has been worse than second in her life and this may be duck-soup.

HOW AND ARROW, which qualified nicely, and FLORADORA, which may be a bit better than ordinarily rated, are the contenders.

Gansett

Hirsch's Jacobs' ACTION, which had copped 11 of his last 12 when I looked last time, goes in the Rochambeau handicap-feature of day of Narragansetts ultra successful meeting — and he, too, seems to stand out, particularly since TIME SUPPLY declined to the issue.

Another over here is FIRST BID prime router that is sandwiched away in the sixth at two miles. Then, too, there's SCOTCH GOLD, which I like well enough to make my best bet.

It's nearing the end at Detroit —only a charity day remaining after the Saturday sport. Tab here, BRINY DEEP, RACKETEER and ALL ROWES.

At Crete, the Lincoln handicap takes precedence and I would have to take last week's favorite, the Tranquility farm entry. MANSCO, in the fifth, and PALADIN, best in the seventh, are others I like extra well.

Bring 'Em Back Alive

Buck's Career Full of Thrills

Frank Buck, who brings his great Jungle Show to Boston Garden the week of October 5 to 11, inclusive, has risked his life and limb in the pursuit of the hundreds of deadly and man-eating animals and reptiles which are heading here with him.

His name has become a national household word due to his defiance of jungle laws and his capture of every known existing species of animal life.

His life work of supplying birds, animals and reptiles to the zoos and circuses of the United States and Europe has taken him across the ocean 43 times, 10 times around the globe and led him into the jungles of South America, Africa and Asia.

Buck has traveled by every means of conveyance from the modern streamlined train to the native carts of far countries and aboard jungle animals.

He has perched atop the backs of giant elephants more than 3000 miles as they crashed through the tortuous jungles. Once he walked the entire width of the island of Borneo. And those who have seen him chased by a deadly charging rhinoceros, those who witnessed his shooting off a limb of a tree with a 20-foot full grown python wrapped around it, both features of his recent movies, will never forget or doubt his bravery.

Reveals Secrets

His Jungle Show includes nets and traps of the very latest invention, showing new secrets in trapping and outfitting the world's zoos and animals of almost every known variety.

Buck has saved the lives of many of his helpers and natives through his knowledge and resourcefulness. He captured a 28 foot python bare-handed, after the reptile had struck at a native.

He has stood face to face and come to grips with a maddened tiger, and once saved the life of a baby rhinoceros when a tiger was in the act of springing on it.

Buck has had his hundreds of wild and tame animals will give Boston something entirely novel and decidedly thrilling when he his Boston Garden Jungle Show.

The Show opens Monday, October 5, and runs through Sunday, October 11, daily from 1 to 11 p. m. Special wild animal acts, all thrillers and exciting, have been added by Promoter Charlie Gordon. These will be put on twice daily, one in the afternoon and again in the evening.

Prices for the Jungle Show have been kept at a minimum. Grown-ups will be admitted for 55 cents, children for 25 cents.

Eagles' Backfield Worries Dobie

With one week to go before the Boston College eleven opens with Northeastern at University Heights, the line is causing Coach Gil Dobie little trouble, but the injury-ridden backfield is the source of much concern for the veteran mentor.

From end to end, the entire Maroon and Gold frontier averages close to 200 pounds and every man is a tested veteran with the lone exception of Sophomore Dan McHugh, 190-pound left end, who has won that post against stiff opposition and held it consistently.

Teaming up with McFadden is the veteran Jim Cahill, another 190-pounder. Although only a junior, Cahill has a full season of varsity experience, and is rated highly by all who have seen him. Dominick, 195, and Ed Kacer, Gilman, 205, both veterans and lettermen are having a grand battle for the left tackle berth with the outcome a tossup, while John Stroppel, 196, holds forth at the other tackle post.

Captain Alex Puzenny, a veteran of two years and 220-pounder, and Zaitz, also with two years of varsity play behind him, are the guards.

Vin Keough, veteran senior center, returned to practice yesterday, to take over the first string job, passing herb on the first eleven, which he held intermittently for the past two years. A knee injury has kept him idle for a few days.

The backfield is far from settled, however, with quarterback Tony DiNatale, Dobie's best kicker, a fine passer, ball carrier and field general, and Albert Tortolini, right halfback, the only certain starters to date.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

ASSOCIATION OF IDEAS: Eddie Donovan, the Scotch boy who gets to town late, seldom was in and out of the Record office correspondent had a chance to catch up with it's Colonel Edward Donovan now as our hero is a member of the Florida Governor's staff and pretty soon, powerful Eddie gets Governor we wonder next will be the czar of the famous Bradley's Casino in Palm Beach. Colonel Donovan's married to the widow of Tim Connors, the man who built the Connors highway, owner of a Buffalo newspaper and tractor magnate supper New York. Frey estimates $60,000,000 when he died.

Ed Bradley, the highly religious character who runs the Casino and many of the political rights in Palm Beach, is a very old man. His biography is the open secret, hung back to the days when he was willing to take in the turn of the dice in Oklahoma, is one of the most fascinating unwritten stories in literature.

Also unwritten is the melodramatic feud between Bradley and the late Tim Connors. In 1925, a young man named Joe Smoot conceived a letter to Bradley from the late Mr. Connors. Smoot was obsessed by the notion that a race track in Florida would make some money. Bradley gave Smoot some help but the final financing was accomplished in New York with a wealthy auctioneer supplying much of the capital.

When Hialeah was born, Smoot rode the boom and as the boom was becoming an echo, he became a nightly visitor at Mr. Bradley's gambling Casino. His visits ended up by Mr. Bradley owning the Smoot interest in Hialeah, and although it was never mentioned in the public prints, Mr. Bradley is now silent but powerful partner, with Joe Widener of Ardsley, in the operation of that surface gold mine.

BOSTON AFTER DARK? COLONEL DONOVAN TALKED POLITICS HERE UNTIL THE SMALL HOURS OF YESTERDAY MORNING.

Once Over Lightly

In This Opinion

The motion picture scouts, rather than making their spasmodic Boston appearances with a lot of ballyhoo, should work on cultivating leads around the town some after midnight. Eddie De Lange, the singing red-head who leads the band, is a peppy personality (with talent) if ever there was one. So is a kid named Alma Le Blanc who arrived in town with a girl show and is lingering on.

Study In Contrast

BREAKFAST IN BED by Sylvia Thompson. L. C. Page & Co.

It begins with Reg Benson waking his aunt and ends with Reg Benson striking twelve.

It covers one fatal day in London. But how much happens in the fog-filled city that day! The dramatic problems of the characters are fashioned and all skeins are spun.

The story is woven out of contrasts. Lady Nicholson has had her daughter's breakfast in bed for fifteen years and more who has three babies and a nurse. Poor Hand and no money at all pines for more as maid to Lady Nicholson has had no breakfast in bed for 15 years during the interview and no hope for such.

Meanwhile two lots of fairies are romping, the turmoil in a newspaper office of Lady Nicholson's sister Clare, [illegible] a young writer, Mark Peters, and the perfectly happy steadfast love of the maid Mary, for a chauffeur named [illegible].

The book is most intelligently written, sharp with satire but also tender and compassionate at times.

For in the midst of life there was none of that. Time and Memory couldn't take from them and almost nothing that they could [illegible].

My Wife

What kind of a wife am I seeking?
I'll tell you in just a few lines.
Not one in the glass always peeking
An hour right up to three times.

Not one with a pencil to cherish,
Not one whose sole aim is to dress;
Who cares not a fig if I perish
In furnishing her happiness.

Not one who plays cards until midnight,
All cares just too willing to shirk,
And dead to the world the next morning
When Hubby goes off to work.

O give me the old-fashioned mother
The one who just lives for her home,
Who knows not the meaning of bother
In making this life a sweet poem.

I hope I deserve such a treasure
I'm trying each day of my life
To make myself in a measure,
At least,
Loved by an old-fashioned wife

BANKERS CONFER

Currency Stabilization Discussed

New York, Sept. 26 (INS)—An international conference on currency stabilization was being discussed today by New York bankers, following the French decision to devalue the franc, with the approval of the American and British governments.

It was pointed out that the devaluation planned by the French government is to be followed immediately by an effort toward tripartite stabilization of the exchanges between New York, London and Paris, and that the most effective way to accomplish this would be in a conference in one of the countries involved.

Prior to a definite announcement of the extent of the French devaluation, leading New York bankers who deal in foreign exchange were unwilling to be quoted regarding their views on the spectacular move of the Blum government—looked upon here as the most important event in international finance since Great Britain left the gold standard and the United States government undertook controlled form of internal monetary control.

French interests are known to have large holdings in this country, but in stock exchange circles it was not believed that there would be any rush to withdraw funds to France. Although the Paris bourse will be closed as a safeguarding measure during the period of excitement arising from the alteration in the external value of the franc, it was not thought that it would be necessary to close the New York Stock Exchange, as was done in 1931 as a result of the situation which developed from the abandonment of the gold standard by Great Britain.

HOME LOAN

Advances at Peak

Outstanding advances of the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks to their member institutions reached $126,465,757 on September 12, setting a new high record, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board announced.

From the date of establishment in October, 1932, to Sept. 12, 1936, total advances made by the banks aggregate $246,313,469, while repayments amount to $119,847,712. The number of member institutions, which are chiefly savings, building and loan associations, was 3695 September 16, against 3640 June 30.

BANKERS

End Successful SESSION

Philip A. Damon, treasurer of the Pittsfield Co-operative Bank, was elected president of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League as that body closed its two-day convention session at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

Besides Damon, officers of the league elected were Walter T. Chamberlain, treasurer of the Arlington Co-operative Bank, vice-president; Milton A. Barrett, treasurer of the Fidelity Co-operative Bank, Fitchburg and Duncan Edes, executive vice-president of the Security Co-operative Bank, Brockton, members-at-large of the executive committee, and Warren A. McCorrison, treasurer of the Workingmen's Co-operative Bank, Boston, as auditor.

The meeting was featured by an address by William A. Thompson, director of the bureau of advertising of the American Publishers Association. He said in part:

"In the face of what American business and industry have really done for American people, the present menace of misinformation seems appalling.

RICH IN RESOURCES

"Our country has been blessed with natural resources on one hand and a system of government guaranteeing to each citizen unlimited freedom to pursue his opportunities. The ability of American industry to turn natural resources into products and services and constantly to draw on an unlimited supply of inventive, productive and selling ability, gave us more than anything else, our high standard of living.

"Doesn't it seem strange that business should be on the spot in a country where the commercial system has so much to show in solid accomplishments? Let's start with the fact that in our land 47 per cent of the families own their own homes, 60 per cent own automobiles, 52 per cent have telephones, 41 per cent have savings accounts while more than 60 million persons have one or more life insurance policies.

"We are better fed, better clothed and better housed than any other nation. We can run our automobiles over more miles of good roads; our health standards are the highest; we are better educated; our distribution of newspapers, magazines and radio sets leads the world.

"Through all these advantages this country enjoys, runs the trail of successful American industry, creating wealth and, through employment at good wages, spreading buying power among every element of population.

Mr. Thompson stressed the fact that the inquiry had shown its belief in advertising and has proved that advertising pays dividends in better understanding as well as in increased business.

Earlier in the session, Judge J. Ward Henley of Leominster, chairman of the committee on taxation of the league, declared the hidden tax cost constitutes the joker in the trick of mounting food prices, and that taxes are crushing the buying power of the wage-earner.

Haney on Wages

Supply and Demand OF PRODUCT Decide Earnings

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Sept. 26—From Chicago and Baltimore come several questions concerning wages. Since these bring out some fundamental points, I will discuss them today.

* * *

1—"Why is it that most laborers, and some of the poorest paid, are employed in making the essential products, while some of the others, such as movie actors, who produce non-essentials, are paid the highest?"

Ans.: The above question centers on what is "essential." Who is going to decide that?

As long as the people like some movie actors better than others, they are going to be willing to pay to see the films made by their favorites. And as long as there is only one Greta Garbo, etc., the pay of such persons will be high, although what they do is not "essential." It is a case of strong demand and limited supply.

If the mass of the laboring people would quit going to the movies, the actor's high pay would soon vanish.

On the other side, we find the opposite conditions. The demand for the product of any one laborer in the "essential" clothing or meat packing industries is small. The number of people who seek to do such jobs is large. Thus, the market for their services is overcrowded, and the value of an hour of their time is low.

* * *

Suppose you were to raise their wages and pay them as much as a movie star. What would happen?

The industry would shut down at once, because the product, though essential, is so abundant that it could not be sold for enough to pay the labor bill.

Then the laborer would clamor for a chance to earn the previous wage and go back to work.

The price of the meat or article of clothing might finally rise so high that only a few people could buy it, and, therefore, only a few laborers could be re-employed. What would become of the rest of them?

There is no way to pay high wages as a general policy except where there is a product of high value which is the result of the individual laborer's work, and not the result of land, capital or enterprise. And the value of products does not depend upon how "essential" they are. It depends upon how strongly we desire them, and how scarce they are.

* * *

2—"Should not all employers be prohibited from doing business unless they are able to pay wages high enough to prevent want?"

Ans.: What do you mean by "want?" Do you mean a bare subsistence in food, clothes and shelter? Or do you mean movies, vacation trips, autos, etc.?

The general answer is that there is only one way to pay wages, and that is on the basis of the value of the product resulting from labor, as determined by what consumers are willing and able to pay.

If a laborer does not produce something that sells for enough to pay him a high wage, he cannot get a high wage.

If you force an employer to pay a laborer more than the labor is worth to the employer, the employer will not employ that laborer. The result would be greatly increased unemployment.

If you pay a laborer enough to keep him out of what he calls "want," and do this no matter what he produces or what the employer finds his work is worth, you will find that many laborers will not do a fair day's work. Industry would become so inefficient that there would be less products for everybody.

* * *

3—"Would you advise joining a union? If a man can't get decent pay, why should he have children?"

Ans.: Two chief remedies for unduly low wages have long been advocated by economists:

Deposits Growing In Mutual Banks

Steadily growing deposits and an increasing number of depositors was reported to the annual convention of the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts recently held at Swampscott. In his annual address, President Rutherford B. Smith traced the history of the movement and urged the banks to continue their high record of service to the people of the state. He said:

"My mind runs back to the inception of the mutual savings bank idea when in 1816 the first savings bank in this country was granted a charter by the Legislature of Massachusetts. That bank was the beginning of the great thrift movement which has continued uninterruptedly up to the present moment until today there are in the United States 554 mutual savings banks with deposits of over ten billion dollars belonging to over fourteen million depositors.

STATE LEADS COUNTRY

"Here in Massachusetts we have the largest number of mutual savings banks in any state in our country, namely 193. We have in savings deposits more money entrusted to our care and management than any other state except one, our sister State of New York. Our total deposits exceed two billion dollars and our depositors number nearly three millions. The total amount on deposit in all our mutual institutions represents approximately 35 per cent of all money on deposit in all the banks of this country.

"No one can accurately express in words what mutual savings banks have meant to the people of Massachusetts for nearly a century and a quarter. The part they have played in the lives of the people of this Commonwealth, in helping to make the United States of America what it is today, would fill volumes. In the building and ownership of homes, that safeguard of democracy, the financing of our national, state and municipal units, our railroad systems, our telephone and utility companies, they have through investments of their depositors' money taken a most important part."

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Sept. 26—Unfavorable aspects of governmental competition upon the public utility industry as a whole appear to be somewhat exaggerated with too much emphasis upon the subversive effects of Federal power control, in the opinion of Distributors Group, Inc.

* * *

In a study dealing with the outlook for the industry, the organization concludes that "indications that present legislation may be invalidated by the Supreme Court create a favorable outlook for improved markets for utility securities. Power production should continue to increase with improvement in industrial activity." The study also points out that improved efficiency of operation and savings gained through refinancing have helped materially in enabling the industry to carry an increasing proportion of gross revenue to net income.

Rumors of Ore Finds Denied

Rumors abroad that the strength in International Nickel shares, which have been recording new highs in the London market, was due to "ore finds" met with denials in official quarters. The improvement in the stock was considered due rather to betterment in the company's production and sales of copper plus the advancing price for the red metal. Reports also that the company had pending a 30 per cent increase in output as a result of assaying from the various expansion developments under way in numerous of Nickel's plants. Responsible quarters consider the rumored increase in output as "too high" and point out that reflection of expansion now in progress will not appear until next year. A factor bearing on Nickel shares, too, is the stiff boosts in the price of platinum, of which the company is the largest producer.

* * *

Report in the Street that United States Pipe & Foundry was planning to call some of its $5,000,000 new issue of 3½ per cent convertible debentures, issued earlier this year, was officially confirmed. It was stated, however, that the mechanics of the operation had not yet been decided upon. The debentures, which are callable at 102½ and currently quoted around $123, are convertible into common at $42 a share.

$100,000,000 Rail Equipment Outlay

According to one Wall Street estimate, the country's railroads this year will have at least $100,000,000 net income as a foundation for equipment purchases and other rehabilitation work. This sum appears insufficient, however, considering the various statistical surveys of necessary replacements of obsolete and unrepairable freight cars and locomotives. The freight car reserve is calculated at the lowest point in years, consisting largely of the type which are beyond repair, locomotive reserve also at rock bottom. With the greater demands for speed and service now being imposed on the railroads, equipment trade authorities are actively contemplating a large scale resumption of buying by the carriers.

Bank Optimistic

Officers of the Winter Hill Co-operative Bank anticipate a more cheerful future in banking activities. This indication is based on results during the last 12 months. The fact that payments on mortgages in arrears for July, 1936, have decreased almost 70 per cent from July, 1935, plus the fact that rental collections for the same period have increased over 50 per cent, prove that there is more confidence and more earning power. Officers and directors of the Winter Hill Co-operative Bank feel assured that they and their shareholders are now heading for a period which will show increased revenue, reductions on loans and systematic saving through co-operative bank shares.

LOWER

Industrial Taxes NEEDED

There is no question about the fact that industry in the past decade has been steadily moving from New England to parts of the country with a lower tax rate and considerably lower labor costs. The fact that over 2000 Massachusetts manufacturing plants alone, have established their operations outside of New England is indicative, and, until Massachusetts passed the reduction of the Machinery Tax Law, industry was steadily taking itself to parts of the country that were more inducive to any manufacturing process.

However, since legislation reduced the tax on manufacturing machinery in Massachusetts, saving millions of dollars to manufacturers, important industries including woolen, worsted, etc., have not only decided to remain here but there is a decided increase in the leasing of new manufacturing sites and naturally an increase in employment and new business.

Throughout New England there has been a constant removal of industry to the Southern and Western states. The recent proposed removal of the Pepperell Mills from Biddeford is only one of many. The state of Maine is an ideal manufacturing state. Water power and good labor are abundant and there is every reason that any industry established in the territory should remain there permanently. Industries in New England require adequate protection; the vast expenditures in real estate, plant equipment, personnel and management on the part of our industrial corporations means employment for thousands, continued pay rolls and buying power which is reflected in the individual prosperity of towns, cities and manufacturing communities.

Massachusetts reduced its machinery tax after many years of effort on the part of the manufacturers, with the net result that industry has stopped looking for more advantageous sites out of the state for operation. In many cases industries have retained and resumed operations. It is possible for any state to do the same thing.

In many of our tourist states of New England it is difficult to levy any tax upon an enormous amount of income due to the fact that the units which obtain the income, such as roadside stands, small hotels, etc., are so many and varied that no definite tax can be levied, with the net result that manufacturers and businesses carry almost the entire burden for an enormous industry. This is particularly apparent in Maine, as in other tourist states, and it would seem necessary that there should be some equitable reduction in manufacturing taxes in order that manufacturers should be at least on an equal basis in proportion to their output and income as those who serve the seasonal tourist business.

It appears that a cooperative effort on the part of Maine manufacturers will bring about an amicable and justifiable reduction in assessments, a lowering of property taxes and because of this, an increase in employment, continued pay rolls, increasing purchasing power and the procuring of new industries, all of which will tend to increase the already mounting industrial wealth of one of the leading states of New England.

Weir Calls Self Royalist

E. T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, in an article in the October issue of the magazine "Fortune," says:

"I am what Mr. Roosevelt calls an Economic Royalist," adding "I was born a commoner, have lived a commoner and am still a commoner" while the President was "born in a mansion—in his mouth the legendary silver spoon." He declares that Mr. Roosevelt's background "does not entitle him to pass judgment on the actions in their own fields of the men he calls "Economic Royalists."

"The President is opposed—not only by a small majority—as he says—but almost unanimously by the business and professional men of the country," says Mr. Weir. "They know that if continued to a logical conclusion, his tampering would hamstring the whole economic life of the nation. We feel that the interests of all classes and all its people will be best served if Mr. Roosevelt returns to Hyde Park instead of to the White House."

Big Jump IN BAY STATE Business

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Business in Massachusetts is fast climbing back toward the levels of 1929. And an amazing 18 per cent gain over a year ago is largely responsible.

Figures released by the State Planning Board are the basis of comparison and show sharp jumps in building construction and cotton textile production.

Complete August figures now available not only show the progress scored by business over last year but also reveal a big spurt that earried the Board's index 10 per cent higher than the July figure. This is by far the largest monthly gain registered this year and is much greater than the usual seasonal movement.

France to all intents and purposes has taken the first step. The franc has been freed from its golden chain and now floats with the pound and dollar. Many new promises of monetary stability have been hinted by England and the United States. Notwithstanding the risk of being labeled skeptic, we wonder just what Britain's experts will do. For our part we will not be satisfied that advisers there are content with anything above a $4.50 unit. At an around $5 sterling is high priced in the eyes of many English people and we doubt very much if the collapse of the gold bloc—probably the last major adjustment of the general value of currency—will be ignored by those who shape the pound's destiny.

* * *

Notebook: As far as this writer is concerned he will devote his attention to sterling-dollar rates and not franc dollar rates . . . For it is the former quotation that will tell the real story of international plans . . . And while we are on the subject we want to say that after prolonged study of English views and Bank of England statements we have come to the conclusion that the strategic position of the country is the best since the early years of the Great War . . . And despite the vaunted managed pound theories the gold holdings of England are large enough to guarantee adequate cover for the outstanding note issue.

* * *

. . . The forced news is out of the way and the stock market took a deep breath when it opened for trade this morning and started to make good on some of the promises Stargell, manager of the Curb, made just as prices were in danger of plopping their way down through a temporary prolonged stay. A happy augury that probable points to a full realization of the higher levels we visualized for the fall and business news. However, about adherence to the trading philosophies previously expounded in this column we must add nothing into new highs are clearly established.

* * *

Ticker Talk: We hear some really wonderful reports on what Canada Dry's sponsors intend to do . . . Doubling in price would just about satisfy them . . . Atlantic Coast Line has been moving right along . . . But if Louisville & Nashville realizes on earnings possibilities and then pays out a fat dividend the stock will undoubtedly work higher . . . Because for every share of Coast Line outstanding there is almost three quarters of a share of Nashville . . . Our informants say $4 per share in earnings is Possible this year . . . And a $1.25 per share from actual operations . . . That's why many good observers still think Coast Line cheap.

N. Y. CENTRAL Earnings Up

Net income of New York Central R. R. Co. after fixed charges is believed to have been around $1,000,000 in August. This would compare with a net loss of $832,-173 in August, 1935.

Such a showing for August would complete income for the first eight months of the year to about $2,400,000 or the equivalent of 46 cents a share on 4,992,597 shares of capital stock. In the period of 1935 the net loss was $4,662,891.

Central's passenger revenues continued in run well ahead of 1935. The increase for the eight weeks ended August 29 was 16.8 per cent.

UP FRACTIONS TO 3 POINTS

New York, Sept. 26—The stock market today responded to the overnight monetary news with a burst of buying that pushed leading issues up fractions to 3 or more points.

Most analytical quarters seemed in view the French plan to moderately devalue the franc, and the tri-partite foreign exchange equilibrium agreement, as highly constructive.

In the first morning on the floor of the exchange the ticker was 3 minutes behind for almost two minutes before the first transactions. The pace quickened later and extensive gains were gained in many instances.

Prominent on the upside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Chrysler, Western Union, Westinghouse, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Allied Chemical, Kennecott, International Nickel and Electric Auto-Lite.

Bonds improved with equities but commodities were quiet and slightly mixed.

Foreign exchange transactions were few, but unofficial trades in sterling were reported at from $4.91 to $4.94, against yesterday's close of $4.92. Official quotations for French francs were $4.90 cents off 1/64th cents. A small sale was said to have been made at 3.06 cents. Guilders were also quoted at 67 cents, off 4/8 of a point.

The New Deal Barrier to Recovery

A FOREIGN TRADE policy conceived IN THE INTERESTS OF, NOT AGAINST, American producers, workers and farmers, was pledged to the nation by Governor Alfred M. Landon in his Minneapolis address Thursday.

The disastrous consequences of the misnamed reciprocal trade agreements negotiated by the Roosevelt Administration were laid bare by Mr. Landon in one of the most devastating assaults upon New Deal misgovernment he has yet made.

In discussing this subject the Republican presidential candidate turned his keen analytical powers loose upon ONE OF THE OUTSTANDING FAILURES OF THE NEW DEAL.

The wholly preposterous idea that American foreign trade could be restored by flooding American markets with imported goods, TO BE SOLD IN CUT-THROAT COMPETITION WITH AMERICAN GOODS, has been pursued by President Roosevelt with a tenacity that defies explanation.

In the succinct language of Governor Landon:

"The reciprocal trade program of the present Administration has delayed recovery for our farmers. It has sold the American farmer down the river."

"The way to trade," said Mr. Landon, "is to trade. We Republicans are going to trade, not against, BUT IN THE INTEREST OF AMERICAN PRODUCERS."

THE effect of the Roosevelt agreements has been so harmful to producers of American goods, particularly in agricultural regions, that it almost passes belief a government could have inflicted such a policy ON ITS OWN PEOPLE.

The net result of the Roosevelt foreign trade policy has been to issue blanket invitations to alien producers TO UNLOAD THEIR CHEAP WARES ON THE AMERICAN MARKET.

American producers, American workers and American farmers HAVE BEEN LEFT HOLDING THE BAG.

The fact that all this has been done in the name of "reciprocity" is a play on language that would be comical IF IT WERE NOT SO DESPERATELY TRAGIC.

There is nothing funny in idle factories, in empty pay envelopes or in unsalable crops.

And that is the sum and substance of the benefits America has received from the "reciprocal" agreements to which President Roosevelt committed his administration.

GOVERNOR LANDON has not only attacked the Roosevelt New Deal in its most vulnerable spot in denouncing this destructive program.

He has turned the spotlight of national attention upon the most unreasoning, absurd and indefensible BARRIER TO NATIONAL RECOVERY that could have been conceived by the most ruthless enemies of the American people.

Still the Great Promiser

APPROVAL of the presidential candidacy of Governor Landon by Felix M. Warburg, nationally known philanthropist, brings out the fact that four years of the New Deal have confirmed his original appraisal of Mr. Roosevelt.

The language in which Mr. Warburg expressed his estimate of Mr. Roosevelt's incapacity for the Presidency in 1932 had the wisdom of prophecy, in the light of the nation's subsequent experience.

Mr. Roosevelt, who was then Governor of New York, was described by Mr. Warburg as:

"An amiable candidate who freely promises to each group what it desires, irrespective of how these groups and these promises apparently conflict."

The clearness of his vision is now a matter of national record. The history of the New Deal presents a maze of conflicting AND BROKEN promises.

In his role as THE GREAT PROMISER, President Roosevelt has fulfilled every word of the Warburg prediction.

A Solemn Observance

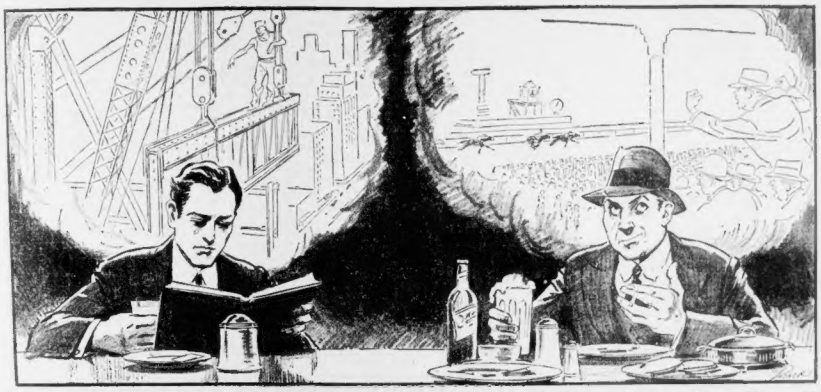
With the singing of the traditional hymn, "Kol Nidre" at sundown Friday, the faithful of congregations everywhere began the solemn observance, with general fasting and prayer.

Forgiving and asking forgiveness, the Jewish people turn to God, trusting that He in His mercy will speedily deliver their race and other races from the unjust persecutions of those that seek to capitalize hatreds and bigotry.

With millions in Europe forgetting God and embracing atheism, the Jewish people cherish the light of faith that has distinguished them throughout history.

They are to respected and praised.

One Bets on Himself; the Other Bets on Horses



You see many like these two (more like the one on the right) during your lunch hour. Which young man would an intelligent girl choose to marry?

Twenty-two million people paid $11,000,000 for admissions to race tracks in the United States last year—they tried to "mould their fortunes" on a horse's pounding hoofs. Their betting, plus the far larger sum bet by people miles away from the race track, totaled more than two billion dollars. Hundreds of millions more dollars go abroad to buy sweepstakes tickets on foreign races.

Some of that was "smart money," bet by insiders who know which horse is likely to win; most of the money was bet "on a hunch" by people who can ill afford to lose, in the hopes of making a fortune.

Young men who spend all their rest hours, most of their working hours, and all of their savings "playing the horses" will make a poor husband.

Occasionally, one will hit it lucky, buy a winning ticket in a sweepstakes, make thousands of dollars. He gets big headlines, pictures in the papers, his grinning face in newsreels. Most of them, in ten years, will have only their newspaper clippings and a hangover.

Girls, looking for a husband who will support them in comfort, give them security and lasting love, will be wiser to pick the young man on the left. You find them if you look long enough.

The young man on the left is "the architect of his own future." Back of that lean face, those clear, gray eyes, a busy brain is building, planning, thinking.

Look at the young man on the right; you can tell what he's thinking about. He would probably be more fun on a party than would the serious young man on the left—but life cannot be one long party.

A lot of girls have learned that the young men who are "the life of the party" can't quite stand up when the time comes to take their girl home. Usually some quiet young man has to attend to that.

Dependability is rarer than the good luck that wins sweepstakes; and ten times more to be desired in a husband.

Whether you are looking for a secretary, a salesman, or a husband, pick the man who bets on HIMSELF; avoid the man who bets on horses.

Man Has Dominion Over All Living Things Save Himself

Below you see Zane Grey, novelist, traveller, big game fisherman, standing beside the world's record shark, which he caught himself. He describes it: "My world's record shark, caught at Sydney Heads, Australia, in April, 1936. Weight, 1036 pounds; length, 13 feet, 10 inches."

You see pictures of big game hunters, standing over a dead lion, or a dead gorilla—either of which would have torn the hunter to pieces if the hunter had not had a gun.

But man's intelligence invented the gun, and before that, the bow and arrow, and before that, spears and knives fashioned from chipped stone. Man's intelligence has fulfilled the prophecy in Genesis:

"So God created man in His own image . . male and female created He them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, 'Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.'"

Man's intelligence has given him dominion "over every living thing" except man HIMSELF. Man invented spears, knives, arrows, sling shots to enable him to kill animals for food. Then as man grew more "civilized," he invented gunpowder that he might kill other men. So today, science works in twenty-four-hour shifts perfecting more murder machines to kill, not animals, but MEN.

Man's intelligence has strayed into the path of man's own destruction. But scientists have begun to rebel against this misuse of their inventive genius for the destruction of man. Read these impassioned pleas from scientists meeting at Blackpool, in England.

Professor J. C. Philip, brilliant president of the chemical section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, said:

"Impelled by patriotic motives, most scientists have put themselves at the disposal of the State in time of need. But many are hesitating to admit that patriotism must always override consideration of humanity. They are increasingly impatient at the extent to which their knowledge is made to serve inhuman ends. It is time for chemists and scientists in general to throw their weight into the scale against the tendencies now dragging science and civilization down and debasing our heritage of intellectual and spiritual values."

Men of intelligence, men of science, must band together, pool their knowledge and their influence, and say to mankind: "That way, lies Death and destruction. STOP! TURN BACK!"

But will mankind listen to the voice of intelligence, or will men forever follow "eloquent men not speaking the truth"?

If man is to extend his dominion over himself then man must listen to the voice of INTELLIGENCE.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Some thoughtless people say that what we need in the United States is a great leader. We need everything but that. We have only to look at Russia, Italy and Germany to see what happens when a nation puts its reliance in a great leader. Dictatorship results. Dr. Ben Cherrington, director of the Denver University Foundation for the Advancement of the Social Sciences, who recently led a group of American educators on a three months' tour of Europe, points out that "strong leadership must have power. Too much power in the hands of leaders is an invitation to dictatorship." When you put all governmental power into the hands of any one leader, you do have a dictatorship.

The American system of government was designed to make impossible the creation in the United States of such dictatorships as have been created in Russia, Germany and Italy. The framers of our Constitution devised a system of checks and balances. They divided the Federal government into three departments—Legislative, Executive and Judicial. As far as it was humanely possible, they made it impossible for any one of these branches to control the other two. They gave the Federal government enough power to maintain order but established constitutional safeguards against dictatorship.

Dr. Cherrington says Europe is a "dictatorial mess" and that its fate is predicated on three men—Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin. You can't conceive of any one man standing for the whole United States as Hitler does for Germany and Mussolini for Italy and Stalin for Russia. THE UNITED STATES IS TOO BIG AND THE AMERICAN PEOPLE HAVE ENJOYED FREEDOM TOO LONG TO PUT THEIR FUTURE INTO THE HANDS OF ANY ONE MAN NO MATTER HOW GREAT A LEADER HE MAY BE.

Whenever the Treasury Department wants to float a bond issue the banks have to put up the money. According to Senator Glass, a good Democrat, "The banks have been brought to a state in which they are literally obliged to take Treasury issues whether they want them or not. They are compelled to take them in order to maintain the bond market of the United States." Bankers know that. Bank depositors and the public generally should know it, too.

Listen World!

I'm not a politician. I'm only interested in politics when they touch my hobby, which is people. At this moment, politics is not only touching but practically trampling a lot of people to pulp—which is why I'm writing this.

No—I'm not going to berate Franklin D. Roosevelt. I know what a mess he tackled, and respect the spunk with which he went about it. But that's all the more reason—as I see it—why I've a right to speak up and say what I think about certain parts of his program which I and several million other unwilling Lords and Ladies Bountiful are underwriting. And, I warn you, what I think is no peach melba.

CAN NEVER FORGET

I may forget many things in my life, including my upper set, wooden leg, original hair shade and first name, but I will never forget the broken men and women I've seen. If I seem to joke, it is merely to hide a fury of pity and resentment, which I never have been able to down.

So I keenly appreciate what Mr. Roosevelt and his associates faced when they dived head on into that mess. Yet, even so, I insist there was no excuse for leaving their Common Sense parked on the river bank along with their shorts 'n' shimmies. As proven by the fact that for four long years we have gone on being Santa Claus regardless of the world's worst crew of workers, a gang of sorcheads, moochers, cranks, hoodlums and general nuisances who wouldn't be tolerated for an hour in their native lands, and who would yowl like Comanches if you tried to send them there.

If you still think that these warnings are a form of journalistic D. T.'s, I advise you to read any one of the thousands of Communistic pamphlets which are being circulated as freely as sand fleas at a Ward Beach Picnic. Or loiter for a few moments round one of our cracker-box Lenins when he's blating his stuff. And if you don't come away feeling that you, in common with all other American citizens, are the runt pig of the litter, I'll eat a cracker-box.

As we go in press, who do you s'pose is doing publicity for a writers' project of the WPA set-up? None other than a recent member of the staff of "The Sunday Worker," Communist publication—the head of the same project being a former associate editor of the "New Masses."

All because, by existing laws, any alien has as good a right to be a steady feeder at our family table and participator in our family mixups as the original bearcats who gave all they had or hoped for to put this country on its feet and keep it there.

TOO MANY RADICALS

Granted, I repeat, that in the first frightful pinches no decent man could choose one hungry man from the other. But that was four years ago. No crisis can go on cruising forever. Plenty has happened in those four years. We have been shown by every conceivable method just what persistent aliens in general and Communists in particular think of us. We have been openly booed and bludgeoned, hoaxed, hissed, spat upon, double-crossed, given the Bronx cheer and the cabbage ear.

And now, to prove what Sweethearts we really are, we're equipping these bumpers with Federal authority and free presses, so they can spread the news faster and send the boys back home a complete Sucker List.

Which maybe you consider civilized, humane, advanced and motherly lovevish. But to me it's PLAIN BONEHEAD! And I fiercely suggest that someone break the news to Washington, D. C., that Too Much is Too Many. And it's high time we cut out all this lovely, altruistic, grain gum-swapping and G-E-T T-O-U-G-H!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 26—In that interlude of wayering chimera between sound sleep and wide awakeness there is for me always a cascade of thoughts. Tumbling out of the past, a backwash of memory. Such as: The dignified editor showing us through his Glasgow plant and remarking they once used one of our "streaks"—Mutt and Jeff.

I like to swim up to this rosy borderland with that pink flush that presages sunrise. In such languor all the world is gorgeously tinted. Out of the fading loam comes a chuckle. Victor Moore's super-idiocy. Removing his neck from the guillotine and climbing up to repair the suddenly stuck head chopper. A George S. Kaufman touch!

A flash of recollecting recalls George Fitch, the Galesburg, Ill., humorist with a Coolidge-like face. He authored the Siwash stories and died all too young.

The drummer called to the pool hall to behold the wizardry of the local artist. To whom he said: "You're wasting time around here." The vaudeville contortionist in a frog suit. The opera house curtain—and its watery bit of Venice framed in barber shop ads, the actors' peephole punctuating the gondolier's rib.

Whirling pictures of thought. How they flicker in kaleidoscope hour in early hours. Snatches of yesterday. A happy Irishman, a bartender in East Liverpool, O., who was wont to say, for no reason, as he raked in change: "And she never smiled again!" Prophetic, I wonder!

Those 15 minutes for dinner at the Santa Fe stops with the Senegambian beating the whey out of a huge gong to direct passengers to lunch rooms. Everybody bolting in wild panic. While a benign tooth-picking conductor inclosed: "Don't hurry—plenty of time!"

Plonk up an ancient story that still winnows a smile. The fellow who walked up to Louis Mann in front of the Astor, picked threads and stuff from his lapels and said: "Have you a five you can spare?" Barked Mann: "No, and you can put those things back."

A scene from a show at Henck's Over the Rhine in Cincinnati. Sophisticated woman in long black velvet drawing the curtain on a mad wine-woman-and-song scene and murmuring to the soubrette she has in tow, with all dramatic stops out: "And this, my friend, is Bo-hee-mee!" Quickly: "If this is Bohemia, I'm going back to Ottumwa." And how we roared!

A vague, futile groping for that Thackerayism in Vanity Fair about the old codger of England who effed to the continent for the waters with which to purge the excesses of a heavy social season.

There: The "Took the Veil" period in American literature. Somebody gave me Meredith's "Lucille" when I was away at school. A bit deep, yet it served as a touch off a young man's fancy. I wrote proposals to five different girls the same day.

And how F. Marion Crawford's story saddened. The White Sister! What tears when she told the young man she was going away in the memorable shocker: "To nurse the lepers of Rangoon!" One could feel the back hair lift.

The first faint rumble deep in the Park avenue canyon. The cash line forming on the Wall-Nut's hips. One wonders where the street sprinklers of yesteryear? And all those industrious people we now saw "keeping things up"—setting posts, trimming hedges, painting back porches, etc.

Thousands of newcomers will begin arriving in an hour or so for their first glimpse and perhaps grapple with the big town. Thousands who figured to drift down country to take a city office job or chase a career. Thousands who will eventually wonder whether to go on grimly or take a what's the use attitude. New recruits for the Lonesome Hearts Clubs!

Thoughts, thoughts, thoughts. Dawn in the offing. The giant metropolis dragging its nocturnal cloak and shadow boxing with another day. Many will take the count. Some to be an dips. Agency! That fellow at the movies with a bag of peanuts and the aroufles. The struggle far away names—Singapore, Madagascar, Zanzibar.
